Wider Power For President On Monetary Goal Planned

Advance Pleases Administration

Criticism Fails to Stop Dollar March of Roosevelt.

By Elliott Thurston.

Administration monetary and legal advisers are contemplating asking Congress for new and broader presidential powers to promote gold buying and monetary experimentation, which produced another increase yesterday in the domestic gold price, this time from $34.01 to $34.06 an ounce.

This was the first advance in the RFC artificial price for newly mined American gold since December 1, and served not only to confound the proponents and prophets of early stabilization of the dollar but to betoken the Administration's general satisfaction with the gold program.

This satisfaction was expressed late in the day by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who cited a Dow-Jones chart to show that a selected list of commodities which were given an index number average of 100 on October 21, just before the gold buying began, had risen to an average of 105½ by last Saturday. In the same period, the artificial gold price had been advanced from an index number of 100 on October 21 to 116 last Saturday.

Morgenthau Is Satisfied.

The fact that the gold price went up much faster than the selected commodity prices or that some commodities declined, according to other indices, does not appear to disconcert the advocates of the present policy, who are interested in and satisfied with, general trends which they attribute to the gold policy, even though the relationship is beyond mathematical calculation.

Morgenthau reflected the assumption that the gold buying has resulted in the 5½ per cent increase in commodity prices.

"I'm satisfied," he commented.

The raising of the gold price by "a nickel" followed a consultation between Morgenthau and Chairman Jesse Jones of the R. F. C. Prof. George F. Warren, who is suspected of being the real inspira-

Caffery Starts Duties in Cuba

Havana, Cuba, Dec. 18 (AP).—Jefferson Caffery, personal representative of President Roosevelt, took up where United States Ambassador Sumner Welles left off nearly a week ago and tonight busied himself studying the Cuban situation at close range.

Arriving aboard an airplane from Miami this morning, Caffery was greeted by personal representatives of both President Ramon Grau San Martin and Col. Fulgencio Batistia, chief of the army general staff.

Several hundred Cubans and Americans crowded the airplane docks when Mr. Caffery arrived. He was cheered for ten minutes.

Political discussions were sidetracked as authorities investigated the killing of Josefina Franco de Gomez, daughter of Poririo Franco, one of the five governing commissioners of Cuba after the overthrow of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes.

The woman was shot by a group of unidentified men who raided her father's country home before daylight this morning and riddled the house with rifle bullets. The head caretaker of the place was wounded.

Child's "Football" Full of Dynamite

Boy, 6, Escapes Injury Playing With Tube.

Rochester, Wash., Dec. 18 (AP).—Wayne Tripp, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Huey Tripp, found a section of rubber inner tube stuffed with something soft in the front yard today. He decided it was a good football.

He kicked it several times and then decided to make a bean shooter from it. He went to mother, and Mrs. Tripp opened the "football" and found two small cans. One contained 20 dynamite caps and a powder fuse, the other 6 ounces of nitroglycerin.

Plaquemine, La., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Six members of a surveying party of United States Engineers were wounded today by a crazed Negro who stood on a bank of Upper Grand River and fired into the Government boat.

Every member of the party was wounded with buckshot, but it was believed none was hurt seriously. Three jumped overboard and swam to shore in spite of their wounds. Their wounded companions maneuvered the boat to shore, picked them up, and all six made their way here, where they were placed in a hospital.

The maniac, Pierre Guillory, was slain later in a gun battle with sheriff's officers.

Four brothers of the Negro, who went hunting with him this morning, were missing and townsfolk believed Guillory had killed them all. Guillory was released from the State insane asylum a month ago.

The Government men were attached to the New Orleans office of Army Engineers, and were doing flood-control survey work in this vicinity.

The men shot were W. P. Denoux, of Rapides Parish; J. A. Kitchen, of Rolla, Mo.; A. C. Showman, of Baton Rouge, La.; A. D. Warner, of Colfax, La.; Van M. Davidson, of Plaquemine, and Fred Richard, a Negro deck hand.

Sister to Mickey Mouse, Daughter To Walt Disney

Hollywood, Dec. 18 (AP).—They were awarding a medal for distinguished service to childhood to Walt Disney, the movie cartoonist, today, and right in the midst of the ceremony Walt grabbed his coat and hat, mumbled 16 words of thanks, and dashed to a hospital, where a daughter was born to his wife. The baby, Dianne Marie Disney, weighs 8 pounds and 2 ounces.

A group of 75 guests at the banquet were at a loss to understand Disney's hurried departure. Dr. Rufus von Kleinsmid, president of the University of Southern California, who acted as toastmaster, was as surprised as the rest, but all was forgiven when the whole story developed at the Good Samaritan Hospital.

All Noisy on Starling Front As Blank Shells Scatter Foe

An old Army riot gun and a 10-gauge double-barrel shotgun were hauled out of retirement last night in the District of Columbia's latest sortie against its flying nuisance, the starling.

After a dozen shots were fired by a roving artillery unit led by Generalissimo Clifford Lanham, hostilities ended for the night at 10 o'clock with the aggressors declaring themselves satisfied. No birds were killed, of course, because only blank shells were used.

The Battle of the Bird entered the gun powder stage at 8 p. m. when Lanham and his two aids, Charles Howard and Ralph Chapin, emerged ominously from their car in front of the Public Library. Field Marshal Lanham and Lettenant Howard carried guns at their sides.

A woman stifled a cry, vanished promptly around the corner on Seventh street and notified a policeman. But headquarters previously had issued an order for policemen in this area to disregard shooting, so . . .

The library and surrounding trees boasted more starlings than a theatrical press agent has adjectives. Gen. Lanham and Capt. Howard, with Chapin standing by in reserve, let go with their ordnance.

Swoosh! The starlings were off. "Boom!" Another volley, dissuading the birds from reroosting as they wheeled gracefully.

Four times the cannon blazed and by that time Commander Lanham and his forces had the field to themselves. They moved down to the Franklin Bank, the Pennsylvania avenue stronghold, and repeated the treatment. People came running out of stores and cafes and the gunners were embarrassed somewhat. But they did move the starlings.

Seventh and G was the next stop, but here a few handclaps in concert were enough to rout the roosting roisterers, at least temporarily. A visit also was made to Twenty-fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue, whence complaints have emanated, but nothing more potent than palm pounding was necessary here.

Last night's foray was mostly an experiment, Gunner Lanham said, but showed enough promise to warrant a repeat performance tonight.

Insull Charged With Signaling Own Downfall

Helped Pick Both Receivers and Creditors, Former Confidants State.

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—Bankers and lawyers who sat with Samuel Insull in a death watch as his utilities empire tottered into receivership and bankruptcy for the holding companies testified today he helped choose the receivers and the creditors who gave the signal for the fall.

They had gathered before Federal Judge Evan A. Evans for a post mortem inquiry into the charge of a bereft stockholder that the senior Insull wrote his own ticket in the shunting of his financial houses into receiverships.

Evidence showed Insull lawyers wrote bills for complainant companies, which petitioned Middle West Utilities and Insull Utility Investments, Inc., into the hands of Federal court receivers; that Samuel Insull, sr., told his lawyer who the petitioning creditor would be, and that Insull suggested the name of one of the receivers appointed.

Jurist Hints Plot.

Federal Judge Evans himself took a hand in questioning the witnesses and, after developing from Samuel Insull, jr., that the companies had but $5,000,000 in their treasuries to satisfy $50,000,000 owed banks and $65,000,000 in debentures outstanding, the court commented:

"The issue may narrow down to the point whether or not the receiverships were planned to prevent creditors from filing claims against the companies."

It was James R. Leavell, president of the Continental-Illinois National Bank & Trust Co., who asserted Insull had nominated George A. Cooke as a coreceiver for Insull Utility Investments, Inc. He said this occurred at one of the private conferences of bankers and Insull men. Leavell had testified that Insull Utility Investments owed his bank $17,000,000 and all Insull concerns owed the bank a total of $40,000,000. He was questioned by Samuel Ettelson, former Chicago corporation counsel, who instituted charges of collusion as counsel for his wife, a stockholder.

Insull Seemed in Charge.

Leavell declared, "I don't know who called the meeting, but the senior Mr. Insull seemed to be in charge. He advised us that it was inevitable that the companies should go into receivership, and it was a matter as to who should be receivers. There was a general discussion, but I recall Mr. Insull, sr., saying he preferred not to be one of the receivers."

At a subsequent meeting, Leavell said, some one proposed Calvin Fentress as a receiver. Fentress was later appointed, and subsequently removed after evidence was

Railways Cut Fares Another 10 Per Cent

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—All Western and Southwestern railroads will put into effect a further reduction of 10 per cent in round-trip coach fares January 2, H. W. Siddall, chairman of the Transcontiental-Western Passenger Association, announced today.

The new reduction will bring the round-trip coach rate to 1.8 cents a mile each way.

Washington Woman, 97, On Visit, Killed by Gas

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 18 (AP).—The strange behavior of a pet dog led to the discovery today of a woman's body and the rescue of six children from a gas-filled apartment.

Mrs. Barbara Gurdischian, 97, of Washington, D. C., who had come to Connecticut to spend Christmas with her son, was found dead in her bedroom. Illuminating gas was escaping from an open jet.

One Shot, 18 Held in War With Pirates

Fists and Clubs Fly at Popes Creek, Md.; 25 Face Charges.

Following an encounter lasting for hours, during which one man was shot, Maryland State police and Charles County deputy sheriffs arrested 25 alleged oyster pirates and captured 12 boats on the Potomac River near Popes Creek, Md., yesterday.

The State Police and deputy sheriffs, occupying three boats, one a 75-foot craft carrying a machine gun, battled the pirates, who were in small speed boats. The oyster men at first attempted to escape, but when rounded up, resisted arrest and attempted to ram police boats.

While fists and sticks flew, only two shots were fired, both by officers. The wounded man is A. L. Evans, of Rhodes Point, Md., who was shot through the shoulder.

Face Two Charges.

Most of the arrested men were taken to jail at La Plata and charged with violating the law forbidding "scraping" of oyster beds and violating the Federal law requiring license numbers on boats. The first charge is a felony, with a penalty of imprisonment for one to three years and a fine of $100 to $1,000. The license charge carries a fine of $100.

Seven men were allowed to return to Virginia with three boats, after they had been identified. Sheriff R. Vernon Cooksey said warrants would be issued for their arrest. Seven shotguns were taken from the captured boats, which were loaded with oysters.

Ten State policemen, under Lieut. R. F. Ridgley, and 40 deputies, under Sheriff Cooksey and Deputy Sheriff Bruce Wilmer, engaged in the battle.

Spotted From Bank.

The Potomac is between 3 and 4 miles wide at the point of the encounter. Gathered on the bank, the officers could see the oyster boats, small motor craft, far out in the river.

Three boats put out after them. They were loaded with police officers and deputies, all armed. The boats included the 75-foot Kent, belonging to the State of Maryland; a cabin boat, heavily armed. The others were a speedboat, the Eel, belonging to Thomas Stein, of Rock Point, and a very fast boat, the Mary Virginia, belonging to Deputy Sheriff Wilmer.

As the police boats approached the pirate craft, the latter tried to make a run for it, but the police boats overtook them. In almost every instance when a police boat came alongside an oyster boat an attempt was made to ram the police craft. As officers boarded the captured boats the occupants, usual-

Virginia Bans Sale Of Burley Tobacco

Markets Asked to Wait for Better Prices

Richmond, Dec. 18 (AP).—By proclamation of Gov. Pollard, Virginia's burley tobacco markets were asked today to close indefinitely, effective at midnight tonight, until measures have been taken to improve the price being paid producers.

The governor's action followed previous action in Tennessee and Kentucky, also large producers of the commodity. In other burley territory individual markets declared a holiday.

The Virginia holiday, under the governor's proclamation, does not apply to tobacco already on warehouse floors. Markets will remain open to dispose of stocks on hand.

No, Mrs. Roosevelt Is Not Santa Claus

Report She Has Riches to Give Away Denied.

A Santa Claus with $50,000 to give away is exactly what Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is not.

Some time ago Mrs. Roosevelt received two letters from Detroit. One was from a man who wanted her advice about how to get money to give poor children of that city a real Christmas. The other was from a man who wanted to know where he could spend $15,000 to the best advantage for the benefit of Detroit children.

The President's wife simply exchanged the letters, she said, because they answered one another.

The stories apparently were misquoted and the impression created that the First Lady had $50,000 in her purse and didn't know how to spend it. As a result she has been snowed under by mail with requests for skates, for $100, for turkeys and for new suits of clothes. Philanthropists have also come across with great ideas.

Income Levy Sidetracked By Rum Tax

By Robert C. Albright.

Postponing final decision on income tax revision until after the Christmas holidays, the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday determined to fight out controversial features of the Administration's liquor tax program Friday and Saturday of this week.

Decision came at an executive session in the midst of committee hearings on recommendations for plugging income tax leaks to the extent of $270,000,000 a year.

A variety of proposals, ranging from confiscatory levies on incomes over $25,000, outlined by Rabbi Sidney E. Goldstein, of New York, to a general sales tax, proposed by James A. Emery, general counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, were argued before the committee.

Tax On U. S. Bonds Urged.

Dr. Colston E. Warne, of Amherst College, asked the committee to repeal excise and processing taxes, tax all Government bonds, increase inheritance taxes and "stiffen income tax rates, especially in the higher brackets."

Meanwhile, the committee, leaning toward a sharp slash under the proposed $2.60 per gallon tax on liquor, toward allocation of a part of liquor revenues to the States and toward reciprocal trade agreements whereby the President might wield the liquor tariff for trade bargaining purposes, determined to dispose of these issues before the holidays.

Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), Washington, subcommittee chairman, said the general revenue bill must be necessarily delayed until the Treasury estimates 1935 emergency expenditures.

All Depends on Budget.

"We want to know how much revenue they will need before we draft this bill," he said. "It may be possible for us to repeal some of the existing nuisance levies, or even reduce the rates on earned income. All of that will depend on the new budget."

Opposition to many subcommittee recommendations for tightening income tax laws, including plans to abolish consolidated income tax returns, was voiced by Mr. Emery and M. L. Seidman, of the New York Board of Trade. Rallying to support subcommittee proposals members crossexamined both witnesses closely.

Emery contended subcommittee recommendations, "taken as a whole, show a startling tendency toward predicating income taxes on gross, rather than net, income."

He urged repeal of the "many existing special sales taxes and emergency levies," and enactment instead of a general sales tax as a major source of revenue.

The committee did not debate the sales tax issue, but Representative Frank Crowther (Republican), New Yark, said he will press the issue before the new revenue bill is drafted.

Watch, in Water 28 Years, Ticks

Will Be Returned to Man Who Lost It in 1905.

Constantine, Mich., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—It takes more than 28 years under water to end a good watch's ticking.

Workmen cleaning out a mill race today found a watch lost by John Putnam, now living in Snyder, N. Y., in 1905. One hand has rusted off, but the crystal was unbroken.

The watch was wound and started ticking. It will be sent to Putnam.

Two Government Aids Lose Offices In 'Fee Scandals'

Black Cat Brings Bad Luck to Him For Rest of Life

Danville, Va., Dec. 18 (Spl.).—The ninth life of Charlie Smith's black cat rose as a wraith today to send him to the penitentiary for life.

Arrested Saturday for shooting the cat and being drunk, he was fined $20 today. Then he was fingerprinted. Check of records show "Charlie Smith" to be Arthur Peedin, 58, who, in March, 1930, escaped from a prison camp in North Carolina, where he was sentenced to a life term for murder. "Smith" admitted he was Peedin.

He told Chief of Police Martin he killed a man in 1907, opened the grave of a Negro woman and buried his victim, but the newly spaded earth betrayed him. His death sentence was commuted. Peedin agreed to return to North Carolina without extradition.

Bolivia Accepts Paraguay Offer To Halt War

Observers Believe Truce Will Bring Peace in Gran Chaco.

Montevideo, Dec. 18 (AP).—Bolivia accepted a proposal for a truce in the Gran Chaco border warfare with Paraguay, it was authoritatively learned tonight.

Paraguay proposed the armistice at the Pan-American Conference to allow for an arbitration of claims of the two nations, which have been in dispute over the Chaco border for 50 years.

Details will be arranged at a meeting of representatives of the two countries tomorrow. A truce, beginning at midnight tomorrow and lasting until midnight December 31, is expected to be agreed upon.

During that period, it is hoped the belligerents will be able to agree to prolonging the truce into an armistice.

Previously President Salamanca of Bolivia advised President Gabriel Terra of Uruguay that Bolivia was "disposed to listen" to peace proposals.

Will Oppose Renewal.

Paraguayan delegates suggested hostilities cease between midnight tomorrow and midnight on December 30. President Terra pressed for an immediate acceptance.

If the armistice is arranged President Ayala of Paraguay said he intended to insist on the broadest guarantees against a renewal of hostilities at any time.

False reports of an armistice this afternoon caused newspapers to blow their sirens in the belief that at last peace was about to be effected.

The Pan-American Conference, meanwhile, virtually marked time while leaders in the peace negotiations followed the progress of President Terra.

At Peak of Drive.

Many were optimistic that a truce would not again be followed by fighting, which has lasted 17 months and three days.

The armistice proposal came at the peak of a Paraguayan drive which apparently routed Bolivians throughout the lower Chaco region. Fifteen thousand Bolivians were reported killed, and three major Bolivian forts were occupied by the Paraguayans.

Ecuador revived a proposal at the Pan-American conference today to invite Canada to enter the Pan-American Union.

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 18 (AP).—The foreign office and the Presidential Secretariat expressed deep satisfaction tonight regarding reports from Montevideo that Bolivia and Paraguay seemed disposed to end their long dispute in the Gran Chaco.

Glasgow, Scotland, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Helen Keller, famous American blind woman, was ill at a nursing home here today. Her condition was not considered serious.

Irvin Cobb Orders Eggnog And Dyspepsia for Christmas

Houston, Tex., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Irvin S. Cobb, who says his favorite pastime is eating, made out his Christmas menu today. It included turnip greens, smoked hog jowl, potlicker, black-eyed peas, poached eggs, cracklin' bread and fresh buttermilk.

"I've written a lot about fancy food in my time, but those are the world's best vittles," the rotund author said as he sat in the home of his friend, Mike Hogg, and looked over his list of desires for dinner a week from today.

"A couple of old-fashioned bourbon toddies beforehand and a glass of good eggnog after," were further suggestions.

"I guess if we've got anything approaching a National drink, it must be eggnog," Cobb said. "There ought to be a law entitling every man in the country to a glass of eggnog on Christmas Day, except a man with a drooping black mustache."

Cobb has hopes of the Nation learning to drink properly, but thinks that it may take a generation.

"Under prohibition we raised a generation with the belief that the purpose of drinking was to get drunk," he said "and it will take years for drinking again to become a fine art."

While he is waiting for his Christmas dinner, Cobb will be "out in the country engaged in the noble and uplifting pastime of bustin' ducks—provided I can hit 'em."

PWA Engineer Fired for Alleged Effort to Levy on 2 Million Fund.

Home Loan Chief Quits in Illinois

One Government employe resigned and another was removed from responsible positions yesterday in connection with alleged irregularities involving attempts to exchange Government favors for cash.

At the same time, war, accompanied by threats of criminal prosecution, was declared on "influence peddlers" by the Home Owners Loan Corporation. This followed similar threats made several days ago by the Public Works Administration.

William C. Donne, of Chicago, Ill., manager of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, was informed his resignation had been accepted, following charges that "influence" was being sold in return for prompt granting of loans.

Engineer Discharged.

Searcy Bradfield Slack, of Atlanta, engineer examiner, division of inspection, Public Works Administration, was discharged with the announcement, contained in official press release, that he had attempted to collect a 5 per cent commission for securing a $2,000,000 Public Works allotment.

Donne's resignation followed a hearing which he had demanded after the corporation received complaints "concerning alleged excessive charges for appraisals in Chicago and Cook County, and publicity given to claims that various attorneys, supposed brokers and others were seeking to act for both home owners and mortgagees on the representation that they could secure prompt granting of loans if paid commissions."

Prosecutions Threatened.

Slack was sent the following message by Secretary Ickes;

"Following an investigation, you are hereby separated with prejudice as examiner engineer and your appointments as State engineer inspector is canceled forthwith."

Shotgun Kills Pastor's Bride

Weapon Explodes as She and Husband Hunt Yule Shrubs.

Front Royal, Va., Dec. 18 (Spl.).—Mrs. Alma West, wife of the Rev. T. Eugene West, pastor of the Baptist Church of Front Royal, was killed this evening by the accidental discharge of a shotgun carried by her husband. They were gathering shrubs to decorate their home for a Christmas reception to the congregation.

After conducting this afternoon the third funeral within a week for a member of his congregation, the Rev. Mr. West and his wife, who were married only last September, motored to the woods 2 miles from Front Royal to gather the evergreen. The Rev. Mr. West carried the shotgun in the hope he might kill small game.

Soon after reaching the woods, Mrs. West tripped over a vine. As she stumbled the minister reached out to prevent her falling. Instead, the shotgun was discharged, killing his bride almost instantly. The minister motored to a farmhouse to get aid. When he returned with the wife of a farmer, Mrs. West was lifeless. The body was brought to Front Royal tonight.

The Rev. Mr. West became pastor of the church here last May. His bride, to whom he was married at Ashland, was Miss Alma Clayton, of that town.

G. O. P. Leaders To "Cooperate" In Congress

Party to Avoid Attacking Roosevelt; Deny Move to Replace Sanders.

Republicans will go into the Seventy-third Congress under existing party leadership and with a plan of action unchanged from that of last spring.

Statements to this effect came from party leaders last night, following rumors of an executive committee move to oust Everett Sanders from the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee, replacing him with the former American Ambassador to France, Walter E. Edge.

Edge himself, declared he was not "in any way an aspirant for the chairmanship," and Representative Bertram H. Snell (Republican, New York), minority leader, in the House, said he was positive Sanders, who managed the Hoover campaign in 1932, could retain the chairmanship as long as he pleased. Senator Simeon D. Fess, (Republican, Ohio), also said Sanders' position was secure.

The minority leader also announced there would be no criticism of the President by the Republican organization in the next session of Congress. Democratic measures will not be opposed for partisan purposes.

Will Cooperate.

The tactics followed last spring, of cooperating on legislation designed for the best interests of the country, will be continued, Snell said. Certain features of the Democratic program are bound to meet with opposition, he added.

A lengthier session of Congress than most observers expect is anticipated by the Republican floor leader. Whereas Speaker Rainey had suggested that the necessary legislation would be out of the way by early May, Snell seemed of the opinion that if Congress rose that soon it would be "quitting before it started."

"I am not in any way an aspirant for the chairmanship or for any other public office," the former New Jersey senator said. "After 30 years in public life I find myself thoroughly enjoying a real holiday, and would very regretfully terminate it.

Reed, Moses Reported Active.

"Naturally, I feel under many obligations to the Republican party for its consideration in the past, and I shall always be ready to render to it any consistent service.

"Nevertheless, I repeat most emphatically that I have neither sought nor have I any intention of seeking any public responsibility."

Edge's statement did not conflict with rumors that Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, and former Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, were trying to oust Sanders, and had been blocked by other members of the executive committee. These apparently well-founded rumors said Edge was willing to accept Sanders' post, but would not fight for it.

Edge Praises Teagle.

A defense of Walter Teagle, president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, was voiced by Edge last night. It had been suggested Edge's friendship for Teagle would be a handicap in any attempt to put the former New Jersey Senator in the chairmanship of the National Committee.

"I am just a little weary of this type of political scarecrow," said Edge. "The Republican party is only going to be successful if it has the confidence of all classes of American citizens and does not run away from a corporate or any other bugaboo.

"So far as Walter Teagle is concerned, it would be difficult to point out a more patriotic or more unselfish American. Apparently the Democratic administration doesn't fear this type of influence, as Mr. Teagle, at this moment, is serving as a member of the Administration's Labor Board at Washington, which, as I understand it, has most potential responsibilities.

"I wouldn't consider Mr. Teagle's friendship and particularly his association with any political movement as a decided asset, any critic to the contrary notwithstanding."

Y., Dec. 18 (AP).—Federal Judge John Knight today denied the application of stockholders of Detroit's closed Union Guardian Trust Co. and the First National Bank for reference to a master in chancery of the question of stockholders' liability for assessments levied by the receiver for the banks.

The question of liability will be decided by trial before a Federal judge.

State Offers Lynch Reward

Tennessee Posts $1,000 for Apprehension of Youth's Slayers.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 18 (AP).—Describing the lynching of Cord Cheek Friday night as a disgrace, Gov. McAlister today posted a $1,000 reward for apprehension of the Negro's slayers, while the county grand jury laid aside all other matters to push a thorough investigation.

While the 19-year-old Negro's body was found hanging from a tree near Columbia in Maury County, it developed he had been kidnaped from the home of relatives here and therefore Davidson County authorities assumed jurisdiction.

Criminal Judge Chester K. Hart, in a special lynching charge, instructed the jury to "take such steps as may be necesary to bring the guilty parties to justice."

Accused of an attempted attack on a young white girl near Columbia, the Negro had been held in Davidson County Jail prior to his release Friday on instructions from Columbia, where the grand jury had failed to return an indictment.

Former Missouri Governor Dies

Gardner Succumbs After Jaw Is Infected.

St. Louis, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Frederick Dozier Gardner, former Governor of Missouri, died here today after a three-week illness from an infection of the jaw. He was 68 years old.

Death occurred at Barnes Hospital, where two operations were performed in an effort to prevent poison spreading to his brain.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 18 (AP).—A merry-go-round for microbes in which the tiny passengers are photographed is the latest device in the study of the microbe world.

No larger than a butter plate, the merry-go-round whirls on a cushion of air at speeds up to 20,000 revolutions a minute. A camera, so small it is built into a microscope, is arranged to take a picture each time a rider goes by at full speed.

Perfected by Prof. E. Newton Harvey, of the department of biology at Princeton University, and Alfred Loomis, of Tuxedo Park, N. J., the scientific carousal will be displayed in action at the science exhibition of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Harvard University, December 27 and 28, when bacteria and other minute living things will be taken "for a ride."

Bank Bandit Tells Of Holdup Killing

Caught in Robbery, He Admits Other Crime.

San Francisco, Dec. 18 (AP).—A bandit robbed a bank here today, cowed a dozen persons with a revolver, shot a policeman, and was captured in a taxi cab whose driver fled.

The robber walked alone into the Geary-Jones Branch Bank and seized several hundred dollars in currency. Then he walked out boldly, jumped into a parked taxicab and ordered the driver to "get going." But the man leaped out. Police came on the run.

Crouched in the cab, Anderson fired at the officers, wounding Inspector Hughes in the leg. Hughes and Inspector Phil Lindecker fired back and a moment later jerked the youth from the cab. He said his name was Eddie Anderson. Police said Anderson, 29, confessed killing Hewlett Tarr, theater cashier, in an attempted holdup November 29.

Ulster Spurns Free State.

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Dec. 18 (AP).—Lord Craigavon, premier of Northern Ireland, told Parliament today that Ulster citizens "are not going to be slaves under a Free State Parliament or, still less, under an Irish republic."

What Makes Guys Tick?

So Gallico Ponders as He Watches Parachute Jumper Hurtle From His Plane, Gambling a Human Life That Wife and Child Below Can Live.

By Paul Gallico.

New York, Dec. 18 (Spl.).—"You will," said old Prof. Swanee Taylor, the flying instructor, "get a bang out of flying your first 'chute jumper. You'll feel sorry for him when he crawls onto the wing. You will wish he wouldn't do it."

Now, I don't recall a thrill at the moment that Joe Crane, parachute jumper, crawled onto the wing of the ship I was flying, but that was perhaps because I was too busy keeping the contraption on even keel. We had 1,800 feet. There was no horizon due to fog. Crane, in his Santa Claus suit and double 'chutes, wedged himself in the front cockpit and, when he stood up, blocked all sight.

The engine was throttled and to some extent his safety depended on my handling the ship smoothly. But I have had plenty of chills over it in retrospect. I can close my eyes now and see that grotesque figure with the red nose and flowing white whiskers, standing on the wing and measuring his distance. He was then a man. Fifteen or twenty seconds later he might be a jelly.

Strange, Superb Courage.

And I have since wondered at this strange, superb courage that dwells in some humans. And, too, I have wondered whether I would have it. And does our courage extend beyond the limits of imagination? I can picture myself scrambling out of the cockpit of a damaged ship and clawing at the rip cord of the 'chute, because it would be the only thing left to do. But could I stand on the trailing edge of a ship of the sky and see the earth and the small houses, and the crawling cars, the steeples and the pock-marked earth, so far below, without a tremor? And could I wave my hand, shout, "O. K., kid!" and plunge headlong.

I remember in the Navy during the war descending 120 feet below the surface of the water in a diving suit. At that depth was blackness. I remember I likened the sensation to being embraced by everything—and by nothing. But the water did have a black solidity. What must it be like to be a free falling body in formless space—akin and fellow to the asteroids?

And who had the greater courage, the man in the Santa Claus suit on the wing of the plane or the woman who stood on the ground below, a child in her arms, and gazed upward at the red package that tumbled from the sky? Later the man who floated to earth came over and took the child because she and it were his.

One Life to Gamble.

Mouths to be fed. Bread to be won, a roof over the head. One chance. One life to be gambled.

Is it courage, or experience? Nerve or training? Is it a dauntless spirit or the blind faith we carry around that our life is charmed and that disasters which have befallen others will not engulf us?

I remember taking a borrowed crate out of Hoover Airport in Washington, climbing her 4,000 feet, and taking a look at the town—until there I was, happy as a lark—until the thought suddenly struck me—I don't think this is a very good plane. What the hell am I doing 4,000 feet above Washington in something made out of sticks and rags, stuck together with wire, and me without a life preserver? I'm scared, I'm dam scared, I'm going home.

What is it that makes guys tick, anyway?

Science Hunt for Great Secret Of Life Declared Near Victory

Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., Dec. 18 (AP).—That science is closing in rapidly on the secret of how life is formed from nonliving matter is predicted in the annual report of the Carnegie Institution.

A life molecule which apparently holds this secret is described by Dr. C. B. Davenport, director here of the department of genetics of the institution. This molecule is called the "gene," an ultra-miscroscopic particle apparently made by the joining of a number of atoms. Genes carry all the characters of heredity in body and in germ cells.

"When we understand the structure of the gene," Dr. Davenport states, "we shall know the essential difference between living and nonliving matter.

"The geneticist should shortly be in position to aid the chemist in getting at the ultimate nature of living matter, and especially must both cooperate in the solution of that fundamental property of the living molecule, its capacity for dividing indefinitely with retention of all its qualities.

"For upon this property depends all agriculture and animal husbandry—depends all life itself.

"Before the self-dividing molecule had been evolved, this was a lifeless world; unless it has been evolved in other planets, they are lifeless still.

"The living, dividing molecule, of which the gene is a special sort, is the great upbuilding agency in a universe that is running down. The genes create living matter out of the nonliving material, while periodically that which they have created is returned to its source for new generations to feed upon."

Congress May Give RFC New Lease on Life

After Jan. 23, Revolving Fund Will Be Low, Chairman Says.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Extension of the lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—which expire automatically January 23—also may mean Congressional action to broaden its present limitations so the corporation can continue the emergency financing of the New Deal.

This became likely yesterday on the strength of a statement by Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the R. F. C. to the effect that its revolving fund then would be too low for any more major projects. Sufficient margins still exist to care for present undertakings, he made clear, but almost all of the corporation's $4,000,000,000 resources have been used.

Chief reason advanced in favor of increasing the amount the R. F. C. may obtain from the Treasury is the need for loans to closed banks. Already approximately $540,000,000 has been allocated for such loans. Mr. Jones said, and he added that about $500,000,000 more could be used if the Government continues its present policy of freeing deposits.

Another possible demand for funds may come from the proposed export corporation to be set up under the direction of George N. Peek, who was transferred from the A. A. A. to give his marketing ideas freer rein. Mr. Jones has not yet discussed the matter with Mr. Peek, but it was thought the R. F. C. would be called on for whatever financing might be needed to provide credits in the promotion of American exports.

Individual Loans Studied.

Meanwhile speculation continued on the possibility of the Administration asking Congress to amend the R. F. C. to allow direct loans to individuals, as proposed and defeated at the last session. Mr. Jones told reporters at the White House that the question has been discussed with the President, but that no decision has yet been reached.

"I have not made up my mind about it," he replied to a question.

Such loans, he hastened to explain, not only would involve considerable difficulty but also would cause enormous expansion of the present corporation. So far, the R. F. C. has made advances to mortgage companies, which in turn dispersed the money, but if individuals were allowed direct loans the corporation would have to handle and watch securities and would need local agencies.

One of the difficulties to overcome would be the disposition to borrow from the R. F. C. to repay bank loans. This would be contrary to the Administration's policy, which has been attempting to persuade banks to loosen up on credit to hasten a general revival of business.

Mortgage Loans Difficult.

That the mortgage company plan also has its drawbacks was conceded by the R. F. C. chairman, who said the problem lay in getting together groups with sufficient backing. Altogether, not more than $5,000,000 has been loaned to these companies, he estimated.

Final decision on whether the R. F. C. will enter the field of individual loans will up to Congress. Whatever proposal is made will be for relieving the small business man, in need of funds to carry on increased pay rolls of the NRA.

Sees Billion as Need.

Pressed for a figure as to future needs of the R. F. C., Mr. Jones said he believed not more than $1,000,000,000 would be required. The corporation has used up its capital stock of $500,000,000, owes the Treasury $2,232,000,000, and has outside commitments of about $1,000,000,000, Mr. Jones said. This is close to the limit of the law, which held the amount of R. F. C. debentures the Treasury might accept to six times the amount of the capital.

However, the amount that may go for the purchase of preferred bank stocks or notes is unlimited and to date the R. F. C. bank holdings already have reached $627,000,000. Explaining enough funds remain until action by Congress, Mr. Jones also pointed out that, whereas $250,000,000 was set aside for cotton loans, only between $45,000,000 and $50,000,000 has been used, that of the $150,000,000 earmarked for corn loans, at least $135,000,000 remains.

Congress Action Uncertain.

While extension of the R. F. C.'s lending functions is unquestioned, how far Congress will go was a matter of speculation. It was considered a strong possibility that Congress might be asked to continue the corporation indefinitely, giving the President the right to end it by proclamation when the emergency has passed.

Foreign Bond Holders Form Salvage Board

Quasi-Federal Protective Council Faces Tedious Collecting Job.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

After a delay of six months, the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council, Inc., was established yesterday for the purpose of assisting American investors in all public bonds by foreign governments, States and municipalities now in default.

The corporation, formed under the laws of Maryland, will be a strictly private institution, although it has the blessing of the Roosevelt Administration since its formation was inspired in October by the President. It is expected the United States Government will give whatever help it can to the corporation without involving itself in international disputes.

Raymond B. Stevens, former member of the Federal Trade Commission and one-time financial adviser to the Siamese government, was elected president of the council. Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth College, and Laird Bell, Chicago attorney, were named vice presidents. M. B. Lane, chairman of the Citizens & Southern Bank, Savannah, Ga., was selected treasurer.

Notables on Board.

These officers with an executive committee will operate the new corporation, which will indertake to salvage as much of the American investment in foreign defaulted bonds as is possible. The council also will be under the general supervision of a board of directors comprising nationally known persons.

The task before this corporation is regarded as one of the most difficult ever to develop in the field of international finance. It is difficult to find an estimate for the total of foreign government bonds in default, since there are varying degrees of the latter. In many cases interest and amortization are being met in part. In Germany, for instance, the service of bonds is being carried on 50 per cent in cash and 50 per cent in scrip.

Therefore, excluding cases where some arrangement has been made to carry on the debt service in part, foreign government bonds held in this country in default total something more than $1,500,000,000. This figure does not include the defaulted bonds of foreign corporations and private enterprises held in the United States, nor will the newly formed council undertake to deal with the latter.

To Ignore Private Bonds.

It is understood that the council will confine its activities to government bonds, because other foreign bondholders' associations abroad exclude them; because such cases are both numerous and legally intricate, and because in most other cases the investor can seek a remedy by law whereas a sovereign power can not be haled into court.

In its underlying purposes and method of operation the council incorporated yesterday will be similar to the British and French foreign bondholders' associations which have existed for many years. This type of organization is new to the United States and received its greatest impetus last spring when Congress gave the President power to form a bondholders' association under Federal Trade Commission auspices.

President Roosevelt and the State Department, however, took the view that this Government should not become involved as a bill collector in foreign finance. It was contended that such an agency could not make representations to a foreign government without committing the United States Government.

Carries Federal Prestige.

Once this decision was made, the President directed a group of State Department and Federal Trade Commission experts to work out a plan whereby a foreign bondholders' protective agency could be set up under private auspices, but with sufficient prestige to command the confidence of American investors and the respect of foreign debtors. The corporation formed yesterday was the result of this study.

In announcing formation of the council, its officers pointed out that the large volume of foreign bonds in default "constitutes one of the major problems to be dealt with in world recovery" and "creates a situation which, unless handled in a proper and orderly way, can seriously disturb the relations of the United States with many of the foreign nations involved."

The council officers, however, cautioned holders of defaulted bonds that "in view of the depression and the disorganization of world trade there is little that can be done toward bringing about prompt resumption of interest and sinking fund payments."

On the other hand, they warned the debtor countries that "they should not regard the formation of the council as an indication that American bondholders are ready to negotiate permanent settlements on the basis of the present impaired capacity of debtors to pay."

Financed by Holders.

The council will be financed by contributions from those it is expected to serve—bondholders banks, investment houses and foreign trade groups—and possibly with aid from endowed foundations. The corporation will be a nonprofit-making enterprise and its directors will serve without compensation.

The executive committee named yesterday, in addition to the president and vice presidents, includes Hendon Chubb, marine insurance man; Pierre Jay, chairman of the Fiduciary Trust Co. of New York; T. D. Thacher, Solicitor General in the Hoover Administration, and J. C. Trephagen, president of the Bank of New York & Trust Co.

Those named to the board of directors were Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy; Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War; J. Reuben Clark, former Undersecretary of State and once Ambassador to Mexico; W. L. Clayton, Houston cotton broker;

New York Deb Keeps Promise By Elopement

Charlotte Milburn Weds Secretly After Once Changing Mind.

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Charlotte Milburn, of the Social Register, eloped all right—just as she said she would—and became the bride of Hugh Parker Pickering, of Chicago.

Her mother, Mrs. Hollingsworth Peabody, of Park avenue, announced the wedding today and said it was "a complete surprise—I know Mr. Pickering very slightly."

Last night the couple hied to Harrison, N. Y., where the Rev. Theodore O. Passelt, jr., of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church, married them.

The wedding settled the issue which kept society agog for more than 12 hours, for Saturday night Charlotte—her friends call her Chotty—jolted Mayfair with the sudden announcement that she and Pickering would elope.

Had Changed Minds Once.

They left a carnival in the wee hours of the Sabbath and said they were bound for the altar by the Harrison route.

But later in the day they came back, still single.

"We changed our minds," Charlotte giggled. "We were half way there when I began to think of what a scene it would cause if we were married this (Sunday) morning. So we came back home."

She added then that she intended to marry Pickering soon, and about 12 hours later they were man and wife.

Mrs. Pickering is the daughter of Ralph Milburn, of Clearwater, Fla., and the niece of Devereaux Milburn, the polo player.

Nearly Married Before.

Less than a year ago she startled society when word trickled here from Havana that she almost married Freddie Ziegler, jr.

Pickering is the son of Mrs. Grace Pickering, of Chicago. He was divorced three months ago from Merry Fahrney, of Oak Park, Ill., who eloped recently with Frank Eiszner, of River Forest, and was injured less than an hour after the ceremony in an automobile accident that killed Donald Eiszner, brother of the bridegroom.

Physicists Believe They Picture Actual Creation of Matter.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 18 (AP). New photographs of the strange behavior of 3,000,000,000-volt invisible bullets of light—cosmic ray photons—have been taken by Dr. Carl D. Anderson.

The 28-year-old research fellow at the California Institute of Technology does not incline to that view. He will leave with the pictures in a few days to present the latest evidence he has discovered to the American Association for the Advancement of Science in its session at Boston, next week.

His pictures, taken in a cloud chamber filled with argon gas, show the progress of photon collisions with lead atoms much like a double skyrocket. With the first collision in passage through two millimeters of lead, is shown a spray or shower of electrons and positrons, that is, negative and positive particles, just like the bursting of a skyrocket.

But it is disclosed that there are photons also in this spray, and in passage through a second lead screen, the secondary photons collide and burst out a second shower of electrons and positrons.

The energy of the electrons and positrons in the first spray are of the order of from several hundred million to three billion volts. In the shower of secondary photons the energies are of the order of tens of millions of volts.

"Cosmic radiation effects," said Dr. Anderson, "indicate that the particles are actually coming out of the nucleus of the atom of collision, and not the creation of matter.

"In studies of thorium rays there is some doubt. However, if this doubt can be resolved into the theory that it is creation of matter, such matter would exist only a billionth of a second and then be reconverted into radiation."

"Liberals" Hit By Dickinson

Iowan Warns Business to Guard Against "Professors."

Philadelphia, Dec. 18 (AP).—Saying a "wild period of expansion" led men and municipalities into the depression, Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, asserted today the Federal Government was "traveling the same route."

"It is time business wakes up and finds out what can happen when professors get hold of you," he said. "The Constitution was not framed to deprive you of any right, but to protect your rights."

Five hundred delegates from Eastern and Midwestern States adopted a resolution calling ratification "economic suicide" and urging an economic survey before any action is taken.

Leaving the room as Senator Dickinson concluded his speech, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, described the Iowan as "just one of those reactionary Republicans" and asserted President Roosevelt's program had "saved the country."

Brown Submits Revised Police Precinct Plan

Hazen to Present Chief's Proposal Today to Commissioners.

Revision of the present police precinct plan was formally recommended to the District Commissioners yesterday in a report submitted to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Maj. Brown proposed 12 precincts, exclusive of the harbor precinct, which would be divided into three inspection districts. The old No. 4 precinct would be restored with some changes in boundaries and the present No. 5 precinct would be made No. 12.

Boundary Line Defined.

The boundaries of the new Fourth Precinct were outlined by the police chief as follows: "Beginning at the center of an imaginary line through the middle of the Ellipse and a line drawn through the middle of the Mall, thence east along the imaginary line to the center of the Mall and the United States Capntol grounds to the center of the United States Capitol, thence south along an imaginary line through the United States Capitol and the Capitol grounds to South Capitol street, thence south along the center of of South Capitol street to its intersection with the Anacostia River, thence in a southwesterly direction along the north bank of the Anacostia River to the southwest point of the War College grounds, thence on an imaginary line across the Washington channel to Hains Point, thence along the east wall on the southerly side of Potomac Park to its intersection with the Highway Bridge, thence in a southerly direction along the east side of the Highway Bridge to high-water mark on the Virginia shore, thence in a northerly direction along the west side of the Highway Bridge to the east side of inlet to Tidal Basin; thence in a northerly direction along the east shore of the Tidal Basin to its intersection with an imaginary line drawn through the center of the shore of the Tidal Basin to its intersection with an imaginary line drawn through the center of the Ellipse, thence north along said imaginary line to the point of beginning."

Fifth Precinct Boundaries.

U. S. Sanction Of Saito Stirs Surprise Here

New Envoy From Japan Close to Bottom of Seniority List.

By Kendall Foss.

Hirose Saito, bluff, outspoken and 47 years old, will be the next Japanese Ambassador to the United States. His name was officially submitted by Tokyo over the week-end and agreement was given here yesterday.

Despite frequent reports from Tokyo during the past week that Saito, now serving as minister to Netherlands, would be the imperial choice for the Washington post, some surprise was noticed when official confirmation followed the reports.

The surprise derives largely from the new ambassador's position in the Japanese foreign office's seniority list. Saito is four from the bottom, only two ahead of the present counsellor and charge d'affaires, Toshihiko Taketomi, and a total of 25 places below the retiring ambassador, Katsuji Debuchi.

13 Seniors on Active List.

Thirteen of his seniors are on the active list; the rest may or may not ever receive new appointments. They are so close to the retiring age that it is believed likely they will finish their terms in their present posts and then be transfered to the "waiting list" until they reach the pension point.

Another occasion for surprise is found in the diplomatic unusualness of a name becoming known before it is formally submitted and agreed to. In the absence of formal submission, many tended to discount the accuracy of advance reports.

Saito may be said definitely to enjoy the confidence of military leaders in Japan. This confidence was not always accorded Debuchi, and its absence may have had something to do with his retirement.

Fails to Win Applause.

Bureaucracy and seniority being what they are, it is a safe assumption Saito's seven-league leap over the heads of his colleagues in the foreign service fails to win their hearty applause. His preferment can only be attributed to the strength of those groups outside the foreign office known to esteem him.

Close followers of Japanese affairs have been watching Saito's rapid rise with interest. They are more than interested at this new indication of how the balance of power lies in Tokyo. They see in the appointment a demonstration of military strength, an army score off Debuchi, an indirect message for the foreign minister. The significance of this show of strength is deep.

Although Tokyo is understood to be anxious to have the new ambassador installed as soon as possible, it has not yet been announced whether Saito will come directly here from Holland or take time to go the long way via Tokyo, conferring with superiors en route.

Bank Receiver Action Delayed

United Savings Depositors Invited to Discuss Reopening.

Depositors in the restricted United States Savings Bank were urged last night by the Central Business Men's Association to attend a meeting at 8 p. m. Friday, December 29, in the Arlington Hotel to make plans for reopening this institution.

The association after two meetings yesterday decided to suspend its request to the Treasury Department for a receivership for the bank, pending decision of depositors at this meeting.

The reorganization committee directing reopening of Industrial Savings Bank as the Industrial Bank reported preparation of a personnel list for the new bank. This will be submitted to Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor for approval. Stock is selling at a satisfactory rate, it was said. The committee will meet again tomorrow night.

Franklin National Bank still awaits a Treasury decision on the percentage of deposits to be made available on reopening as a part of the new Mechanics-Franklin Savings Bank.

School Nears Capacity Limit

Officials Believe They Can Avoid "Stagger" Plan at Western.

Every effort will be made to avoid placing Western High School on a staggered plan after the Christmas holidays, Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent, told The Post last night.

"We are nearing the ragged edge," he said, "but there is still a possibility that we may avoid a staggered program. It will depend on how we can distribute students in classes. We can not reach a definite decision until January or February."

The present enrollment at Western is 1,778. A few students will leave at the end of this year, and 150 new students will enter after Christmas. Western can not accommodate more than 1,800 pupils, according to Principal Elmer S. Newton, but the "tight squeeze" is expected to be handled without staggering the program."

New High Mark Is Set in Daily Receipts; 5,000 Playthings Needed.

The Post Toy and Doll Fund snowball rushed past the $500 mark yesterday and nearly reached $800 by the time the cashier's office finished counting the day's receipts for this fund, which is to bring Christmas into the lives of thousands of Washington children this year.

There was real joy among the dolls and toys as well as the human beings in the headquarters of the toy fund, when word came that the fund had reached a new daily high mark of $156.15.

The Post Toy and Doll Fund's share of the big athletic event given under the auspices of Joe Turner at the new auditorium Friday night was $149.65. Now, in the seven days remaining, the fund must reach at least $1,000, and more than 5,000 toys should be donated in addition, if every needy child is to be given a toy.

Goal Draws Near.

The Santa Claus lady said she felt certain the Fund would go over the top this year as in former ones.

"The people of Washington never fail its little ones," she said. "I know there are at least 500 persons in the city who will give $1 each to make the Fund successful in every sense of the word and surely there are 5,000 persons here who will contribute at least one toy to make certain the Fund has enough toys to meet every demand."

Persons wishing to contribute money should address it to The Washington Post, and toys for the city's needy little ones should be left at either the Post Toy Fund headquarters in the Washington Building or at the office of The Washington Post. Each contribution will be acknowledged in the columns of The Washington Post, provided the names of the donors accompany each money gift.

Early yesterday morning several officials from the Political Study Club arrived at The Post, heavily laden with parcels tied in bright ribbons, the result of the toy collection made by the club at its Saturday meeting.

Some of the toys and dolls at the headquarters went on a happy mission yesterday. They are to be the central figures of the Christmas party for 125 children of needy World War veterans, to be given by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing Post, No. 23, of the American Legion, of which George Oberndoerfer is commander.

This party will take place on Friday at 2 p. m. at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and The Post Toy and Doll Fund gave 200 toys.

2 Government Aids Lose Jobs In Fee Scandal

of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, said:

"We propose to follow up energetically every case brought to our attention and prosecute every violation we find."

In announcing that Donne's resignation had been accepted, the Home Owners Loan Corporation said he had "submitted to the board elaborate data justifying loans made and denied responsibility for all claims by individuals alleging special consideration of loan applications presented by them."

The statement declared Donne had said not one loan had been approved in Illinois on the basis of any special influences.

"At the conclusion of the hearings," the announcement continued, "Mr. Donne presented his resignation to the board with the statement that, nothwithstanding his ability to refute all charges and criticisms, he was satisfied that the impressions created by critical publicity of the corporation's operations in his State constituted such a handicap on his continued management as to seriously interfere with efforts to afford relief to home owners and his successful direction of the work in Illinois.

Auditors Take Over Office.

"He therefore expressed his desire to withdraw in the interest of the home owners in his State and pledge his personal cooperation the work of the corporation."

Immediately following Donne's resignation, the Associated Press reported that the Home Loan office in Chicago had been closed and a staff of Government auditors was examining the records.

William McNeal of the Washington staff of the corporation will take temporary charge of the office when it reopens.

In his statement warning against the activities of "influence peddlers," Fahey stressed that the home loan act provides for $10,000 fines and five-year prison sentences for violations of this character, and $5,000 fines and two years imprisonment for making false appraisals or other misrepresentations in connection with attempts to obtain loans.

"The fact that such a tremendous number of applications have been filed throughout the country, making prompt action impossible, while applications continue to come in, has been taken advantage of by unscrupulous persons," Fahey continued.

Both Sides Approached.

"They approach home owners needing loans as well as mortgagees who are willing to exchange mortgages for the corporation's bonds claiming special ability to advance the closing of loans.

"These pretenders usually allege that they 'stand in' with some representative of the corporation and that this fact enables them to get liberal loans immediately. Of course, the agents of the corporation have no knowledge of these pretensions and such attempts to gouge those having loans under consideration by the corporation are plain frauds.

"No influence of any kind is necessary or will be considered in disposing of loan applications filed with this corporation. No one needs to pay a cent to anyone to receive preferred attention. Applicants for loans with the corporation will get what they are rightfully entitled to; no more and no less."

Talmadge Gives Testimony.

In connection with the dismissal of Slack, the Public Works Administration official press release said Slack had admitted he had told Georgia officials that he could secure them an allotment of $2,000,000 if paid 5 per cent commission. The commission was to be paid after Slack resigned his job, the press release said.

According to affidavits, Slack called upon Gov. Talmadge at Atlanta, and in the presence of others told the governor he could secure a $2,000,000 allotment from P. W. A. for bridges if he were paid a 5 per cent commission, according to the official press release. As services, Slack would draw the plans and specifications and take the 5 per cent, the release said.

Slack stated he had planned to do the work and resign from P. W. A. if commissioned to get the allotment, according to the release. The deal was not made, and subsequently Slack said he realized he had "made a gross error" in putting the proposition forward while employed in the works administration, the release said.

Fourth Move on Lobbying.

The discharge of Slack is the fourth major move taken by Secretary Ickes to discourage lobbying and "chiseling" in connection with P. W. A. funds. Two agents were forbidden privileges of appearing in connection with allotments, and legal action was sought to punish flagrant instances of selling influence. Changes in regulations concerning projects are now under consideration.

In a statement discussing Slack's case, Ickes declared "It is intolerable that any employe of the Public Works Administration should solicit fees on the false theory that they can deliver P. W. A. allotments to any applicant, and it is a futile waste for any applicant to pay fees to any volunteer agents, representatives, lobbyists and other false claimants to "influence."

"I have announced publically and repeatedly that there is no excuse for such action. A member of the P. W. A. staff who seeks a personal gain as in this instance deserves no consideration and will receive none.

"When any such instance comes to my attention there will be direct action without ceremony."

Cleaners Wait For Price List Of NRA Today

New Schedules Likely to Become Effective on Friday.

(Associated Press.)

New price schedules for dry cleanings throughout the United States were withheld again last night at NRA, but probably will be made public today, to become effective Friday.

Although a basis for revision downward in many parts of the country had been decided upon, price schedules were not finished last evening. Just how much reduction in the prices was being made officials would not say.

It was indicated that in some cities the original price structure would be left intact, and all signs pointed against a differential for cash and carry cleaners, who in large numbers violated the first list and who complained that having to charge the same as cleaners with delivery service would put them out of business.

Officials of the National Association of Cleaners and Dyers said they believed the vast majority of cleaners would be well pleased by the new scales, but that they did not expect the cash-and-carry men to be satisfied.

No prosecutions have yet been started against the 100 price violators who were given a chance to comply at a public hearing last week, but officials indicated action might be taken soon after publication of the new scales.

Bay Pollution Remedy Urged By State Board

Allotment of PWA Money Immediately Asked at Parley Here.

"Earmarking" of funds to carry out findings of the committee studying Chesapeake Bay pollution was asked of the Public Works Administration yesterday.

The Virginia P. W. A. advisory board, accompanied by George Ratcliffe, regional advisor, called at the offices of Col. H. M. Waite, deputy administrator, to discuss the project and request segregation of funds.

They pointed out that the Chesapeake Bay Authority, appointed by Mr. Ratcliffe, had virtually completed its survey of the bay pollution. In addition, the special committee named by Gov. Pollard at the direction of the recent special session of the Legislature, is now engaged in studying the problem in the vicinity of Hampton Roads.

The discharge of sewage, garbage and refuse into the bay has rendered the situation at Hampton Roads acute, the board declared. Production of sea food is threatened.

Study of the health menace already has been undertaken by the Public Health Service with P. W. A. funds. Although reports are not yet complete, the Virginia board feels that a P. W. A. allotment to carry out recommendations should be made before the funds are exhausted, hence took the matter up with Col. Waite and his assistants.

Slayer's Wife Wins Parole In Maryland

Grace Cothron, Imprisoned for Crime 14 Years Ago, Freed by Ritchie.

Annapolis, Dec. 18 (Spl.).—Grace C. Cothron, who, as a 17-year-old girl, looked on while her husband murdered a colored taxidriver in the woods near the Montgomery-Prince Georges County line 14 years ago, is among 39 prisoners in Maryland penal institutions who will be paroled by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie this Yuletide. She was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Cothron, whose case has been before the governor on numerous occasions, causing him, in his own words, "more concern than I can recall," will be sent to join her mother in Florida, and will be under supervision of the Prisoners Aid Society. A condition of her parole is that she shall remain absent from Maryland.

Planned to Rob Bank.

With her husband, Clarence, now serving a life term for two murders, and an accomplice named Eugene Landers, who never has been apprehended, Mrs. Cothron drove in a taxicab from Baltimore to Highland, Md., in the summer of 1919, for the purpose of robbing a bank. The robbery failed to materialize, so on the way back the men had Homer Jones, the taxi driver, take them to a wood, where they beat him to death, stole his money and the cab and left the body, which was discovered and identified months later.

In the meantime, Cothron had murdered another colored taxidriver, John Weldon, of Philadelphia, and he and Grace had been arrested in Florida, where they had gone after kidnaping 9-year-old Mamie Grosscup from Baltimore. Their guilt in the Jones murder was established at their kidnaping trial.

Gov. Ritchie, to whom appeals were made on Grace's behalf, made an exhaustive study of her mental condition and habits, denying clemency on a number of occasions. In granting her parole, he said she had been married as a girl to a man of vicious, criminal habits, who exerted a bad influence over her, and that he believed she now will be able to reestablish herself.

Vermont Goes To Polls Today

2 Parties Pick Congress Candidates; Lack of Issues Marks Race.

Montpelier, Vt., Dec. 18 (AP).—Vermont tomorrow nominates Republican and Democratic candidates for both the U. S. Senate and the House of Representatives after a campaign noteworthy for a lack of issues.

The primary tomorrow and the special election January 16 were occasioned by the death of U. S. Senator Porter H. Dale, the subsequent resignation of Representative Ernest W. Gibson and his appointment to Dale's place.

Gibson is unopposed for his party's nomination and will wage battle in the election with Harry W. Witters, also unopposed for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

The only contest before the electorate tomorrow is that in which five candidates, one a woman, seek the Republican Congressional nomination. Robert W. Ready, chairman of the State NRA board, is unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

These included accounts of the revolution and then the republic with resultant establishment of the Irish Free State.

Plea Offered If Crawford's Life Is Spared

Guilt in Buckner Murder Would Be Conceded by Defense.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 18.—Commonwealth's Attorney John Galleher will give his decision this week regarding an offer by counsel for George Crawford to have Crawford plead guilty to the murder of Mrs. Mina Buckner, slain with Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley January 13, 1932, on condition their client will not be sentenced to death.

Crawford, found guilty of Mrs. Ilsley's murder last week and sentenced to life imprisonment, is ready to spare the Commonwealth the expense of another trial, Dean Charles Houston of Howard University Law School advised Galleher.

Houston also said he would drop plans for an appeal to the higher courts on the ground Negroes were excluded from the jury if Galleher would agree and the court here would consent to giving Crawford a life sentence for the Buckner murder.

If assurance is given that Crawford will not be sentenced to death upon a plea of guilty his counsel will do everything in their power to assist in locating "Charley Johnson," named as the convicted man's accomplice in the slaying of Mrs. Ilsley, Houston said. Otherwise, the defense is ready to proceed with Crawford's trial on the second murder charge.

Galleher said he had taken the proposal under advisement and would make known his decision later in the week.

French Chiefs Reject German Plan to Rearm

Military Leaders Move to Keep Their Own Ranks Filled.

Paris, Dec. 18 (AP).—French military leaders decided today to oppose flatly any rearmament in Germany and developed plans for keeping army ranks filled during the years beginning in 1936, when the low birthrate in the World War years will make itself felt.

As members of the superior war council, the chieftains met in a secret session, studied Chancellor Hitler's demands for arms equality and prepared to pass their adverse recommendations on to the government.

Gen. Maxime Weygand, the chief of the general staff of the French army, and former premier Edouard Daladier, now minister of war, attended.

Berlin to Get Reply.

After the ministers of war, navy and air have discussed the military findings, the government plans to send the reply to Berlin. Another ministerial decision will involve the wisdom of further Franco-German talks on disarmament.

The council decided that 15,000 specialists will be enlisted and troops who engaged in the pacification of Morocco will be returned to France.

Normally at least 200,000 youths past 21 are available for army service, but beginning in 1936 war ministry officials fear the minimum may fall as low as 100,000.

This is because comparatively few boys were born during the war and because of the high infant mortality at that time.

Act to Meet Situation.

One move to keep the minimum number of recruits as constant as possible was taken earlier this year, when many of the summonses of the war classes were adjourned, and young men 19 or 20 years old were told to start their compulsory service after their twenty-first birthdays.

An important point in the direct ambassadorial talks so far held concerns the French attitude that if Germany is allowed the army of about 300,000 men she wishes, that number should include Nazi storm troopers, regarded here as a military force, although in Germany they are considered merely as party members.

Berlin Accepts Bid.

Rome, Dec. 18 (AP).—Germany's willingness to attend a four-power meeting to straighten out the disarmament impasse, it was reported tonight in well-informed circles, was made known to Undersecretary Fulvio Suvich during one of his recent conferences in Berlin.

This agreement will be coupled, however, with the firm insistence that Germany will continue to press demands for arms equality which have not been acceptable to France, it was understood.

Premier Mussolini will discuss the possibility of calling a four-power parley with Sir John Simon, the British foreign secretary, who will spend his Christmas holidays in Italy and talk over world issues with Italian statesmen.

Stoke, England, Dec. 18 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon today blamed a desire to rearm on fear among nations "who ought to be neighbors."

"We do grave injustice if we imagine modern communities are piling up armaments merely from reckless ambition or a desire to be aggressive," he said in a speech.

"The real explanation is the fear which prevails among some who ought to be neighbors."

Glancing Backward.

A train of recollection spanning many years is set in motion by the recent auction sale at the old Dewey home on K street. Events fresh from the gay nineties spring to the minds of Washington's old-timers as this quaint old mansion comes once more into the limelight. Looking backward, we see another indication that our city has passed on to a new era.

Three decades ago this towering mansion, with its curious double bay windows, was one of the show places of Washington. Tourist guides seldom allowed its magnitude, or the traditions and romance associated with it, to escape the attention of visitors. The home of Admiral and Mrs. Dewey became a symbol of Washington's social life during that period.

Today thousands of busy people regard the old home—if they notice it in whirling by—as merely another example of the now antiquated architecture in vogue during the nineties. In the modern Capital City it is an anachronism, interesting only because of the memories that are associated with it. And even the memories are fading as the new generation encroaches upon the old.

Events like the auction of the Dewey relics bring into bold relief the monumental changes that are taking place in Washington. Imperial edifices of classic architecture overshadow the less harmonious, but more individual, buildings of former eras. The once elite residential areas are being overrun by structures devoted to commerce as well as Government. Thus ruthless changes come in the character and the atmosphere of the Capital as known to McKinley, who was President when the Dewey home was young.

The growth of a city is scarcely more perceptible to its residents than is the growth of a child to its parents. Occasionally a relic of the past serves to remind us how far Washington has progressed toward its "manifest destiny" as a Capital, as imposing as it is important.

A Southern "Oasis."

"An oasis in a desert" was what Judge James L. McLemore, who presided, called the George Crawford case, tried last week at Leesburg, Va. "I have caught a new vision of what can be done and what ought to be done in the conduct of a criminal trial," he told opposing counsel while the jury was out considering the evidence.

Undoubtedly the Crawford case was a high-water mark in Southern justice. A Negro who had confessed his guilt was on trial for the murder of two white women, one of them wealthy and socially prominent. The only thing actually to be determined was the measure of punishment. The cause had become celebrated, in that a Boston judge, hearing an application for a writ, had raised the issue of race prejudice. The defense had also contested the constitutionality of the trial on the ground that Negroes had been excluded from the jury. It was a situation in which, had they chosen to do so, the prosecuting attorneys could have made use of race prejudice, as the prosecution in Scottsboro did recently, to secure a death sentence.

Nothing of the sort happened. There was not the slightest mention, either in the examination of witnesses or in the arguments of counsel, that the defendant was a Negro. There was not the faintest suggestion that the scales ought to be balanced against a black man because his victim was a white woman. On the contrary, the conduct of counsel upon both sides was such as to leave the impression that they were fulfilling, in a dignified and intelligent way, the idealistic purpose of a trial: to establish truth, uncolored by any extraneous consideration.

Monaco Versus Mississippi.

In report after report, the British Corporation of Foreign Bondholders has held up historic default by States of the American Union to the scorn of the world. But eloquence mingled with sarcasm has neither moved our Federal Government to act in the matter nor aroused the delinquent States to a perception of their shortcomings.

Curiously enough, congressmen from defaulting Southern States have been among the most eloquent and vociferous denouncers of European countries that have failed to make full war debt payments to the United States. Their hardihood has been commented upon rather acidly by British critics, but few Americans have minded.

When pressed to show why we manifest such profound indignation at the defaults of other countries, in face of our own record, the answer usually is that conditions are not the same. Sometimes apologists for our defaulting States take refuge in the argument that the bonds were issued during the Civil War or under conditions that rendered them legally invalid, especially during the days of the carpet bag regime. Unfortunately, none of these defenses hold water. The Mississippi bonds present an especially clear case of unmitigated default. They were issued regularly and the default occurred in 1841.

Spice is now added to the situation by a suit which the principality of Monaco has brought against the State of Mississippi, in which judgment for $100,000 principal and $400,000 interest is asked. Ironically and uncomfortably enough, Monaco is one of the few governments of Europe in position to reproach us for defaulted obligations. She has found the heel of Achilles.

Untrammeled Research.

Under the title of "Current Monetary Issues," the Brookings Institution, of this city, has just published a study notable even among the numerous important books produced in recent years by that independent agency for economic and governmental research. And the importance of the book is not confined to judicial and judicious findings which may well give pause to those who have our monetary policy in keeping. Significance is also found in the fact that an organization, numbering both a close relative of the President and one of his ambassadors as members of its board of trustees, should so valiantly uphold the right to criticize Administration policies where the facts call loudly for constructive criticism.

For the conclusions reached by Mr. Leo Pasvolsky, the author of this study, are far from being an indorsement of the course pursued in the eight weeks since the United States embarked on uncharted waters with the gold-purchase policy for compass. Indeed this economist, with the backing of his colleagues, finds that both the course as planned and the compass used for guidance are unreliable.

The effort to establish a commodity dollar, he asseverates, must inevitably mean "disruption of international monetary organization" and therefore has far-reaching implications which, it appears, the Administration has by no means thought through. But beyond that, this student of the problem finds not the slightest assurance that the policy will achieve the ends too readily regarded as axiomatic by its proponents. Citing not merely American experience in the past few weeks, but also that of other countries with depreciated exchanges, Mr. Pasvolsky concludes that "no definite predictable rise in the commodity price level can be assumed to follow a given depreciation of the currency." While this is no new discovery by the Brookings Institution, the careful character of the analysis, and the wealth of evidence displayed, lends to this verdict a weight which will not easily be dismissed.

Perhaps it is mere coincidence that a further slight elevation of the R. F. C. price for gold—the first increase in over a fortnight—has followed immediately on the publication of this book. But, whether coincidence or retort, that fact is secondary to the impression which this admirable exposition is likely to make upon the country as a whole. And, in some ways, the impression of Mr. Pasvolsky's book is itself subordinate to the fine tradition of untrammeled research nobly supported by the trustees of the Brookings Institution in this case. Not always, in the secluded academic groves, are researchers encouraged to "hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may."

As Christmas Approaches.

As Christmas approaches Government employes are still in doubt as to the status of their salaries during the next six months. The Bureau of Labor Statistics is making an extensive survey of the cost of living among Federal workers in accordance with the provisions of the economy act, but it has not yet been completed. Under the law the President may adjust the percentage by which salaries are reduced only if such changes are warranted by a rise in the cost of living.

The uncertainty which surrounds Government salaries during the next six months undoubtedly is having an adverse effect upon the Christmas trade in Washington, and, to a lesser extent, in other parts of the country. Employes are inclined to curtail holiday buying until they can ascertain whether part of the pay reduction will be lifted. The results of this confusion are not satisfactory either to business or to the employes.

If the Department of Labor could speed up its survey, thus enabling the President to make known its results before Christmas, the vast army of Federal employes would be able to give Santa Claus a more accurate estimate of their resources. It is possible that no part of the salary cut can be eliminated before next July. If so, Government employes would like to know the worst. On the other hand, if changes in the price level, the cost of housing, &c., justify an upward adjustment of the salary scale, every servant of the Government would be delighted to have the good news during the holiday season.

The merits of the salary reduction are not at stake just now. It is a question of applying the law in the manner prescribed by Congress. But the Labor Department and the Chief Executive might help Federal workers solve their holiday problems by making known the status of their salaries for the next half year as soon as possible.

Miss Perkins' Personality.

Writing in the Sunday New York Times, Julian Harris, the militant Georgia editor who knows his South—as well he might, since he is the son of the creator of "Uncle Remus"—says that Miss Frances Perkins, the Secretary of Labor, has made her peace with Southern people.

Shortly after she went into office, Miss Perkins made an address in Massachusetts in which she said that if the program of the Administration succeeded, it would mean an increase in purchasing power all along the line. In concrete terms, she ventured, that would open up a vast market for shoes in the South. Wounded feelings below the line had their reflex in a mighty chorus of editorial and oratorical protest, ranging, in intensity, from gentle rebuke to withering scorn for such "malicious ignorance." Miss Perkins' point was entirely obscured in the fog of resentful words and she became, almost overnight, a Southern bete noire, along with Sherman.

Mr. Harris now records that when the Secretary of Labor appeared in Atlanta last week, Gov. Talmage, whose idea of tact is to give delicate subjects a public airing, referred to her remark. Miss Perkins, following him, frankly faced the situation and made handsome explanation and apology. With a few words, Mr. Harris said, she had her audience smiling and with a few more "became one of the home folk." Moreover, he says Miss Perkins won "the added respect and increased admiration of all who heard her clear-cut talks" and that she "was received with a warm welcome that must have pleased her." The Labor Secretary so captivated the deep South, the Georgia editor concludes, that she may make whatever criticism she pleases of its labor conditions without evoking general indignation.

Once previously the forthright character and straightforward honesty of the Secretary of Labor took her over a high hurdle. Delegates to the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor, which had opposed her nomination for the Cabinet place, gave her much better than polite acclaim. Personality counts with a lady Cabinet member as well as in humbler places.

The Government As Banker.

According to report, the Administration is considering making direct loans to industry for the purpose of financing pay rolls and increasing employment. It is said that the banks are not meeting these needs satisfactorily and that the Government must, therefore, step into the breach and furnish the required credits. The banks defend themselves against such charges, made on numerous occasions of late, by replying that borrowers who are good credit risks have never failed to receive accommodation, when resources permitted. They insist that loans have only been refused when the security against the desired loan is inadequate.

Similar complaints and rejoinders were heard when the Federal Reserve act was amended in 1932 to permit of the direct discount of eligible paper by Reserve Banks. The extremely limited recourse to such direct discount facilities was subsequently cited by the banks as supporting their contention that borrowers with good collateral were not being denied credit.

Since the Administration's recovery program was launched, accusations of banking non-cooperation have persisted. Government officials have scolded the banks for an alleged failure to cooperate whole-heartedly in assisting industry to finance the increased costs of operating under codes of fair practice. The banks have been urged to sell preferred stock to the R. F. C. in order to strengthen their capital structure and make possible more liberal lending policies. A few months ago the R. F. C. also announced an intention to establish mortgage loan companies to assist merchants and others especially affected by the National Recovery program.

So far, only a few small organizations of this type have been established, but in a recent address Chairman Jones of the R. F. C. emphasized the potential importance of the mortgage loan companies in furthering the recovery program. He also expressed the opinion that the purchases of bank preferred stock might prove to be one of the most significant and enduring achievements of the R. F. C. On top of these efforts to increase the amount of credit available to industry, comes this latest tentative proposal to lend R. F. C. funds directly to industry.

No one of the above-mentioned plans for releasing credit to industry seems particularly important viewed as an isolated development. However, if the Administration's program of planned economy depends for its success upon a liberalization of credit policies beyond the point to which conservative bankers are willing to go, the foreshadowed entry of the Government into the private banking field may prove to be an entering wedge for later extensive penetration.

Speaking of Debt Defaults.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Again our former allies repudiate their just debts. When their backs were to the wall "they hired the money," as Coolidge so tersely said, but now snugly safe, they shamelessly default. Gratitude is an unknown attribute to them. It should be a lesson to America to keep better company hereafter.

But repudiation is no novelty to us or to Europe. Many of the States of this country have likewise sacrificed honor for money. Those which boast most of their honor seem to be the worst offenders. Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee and Florida, between 1830 and 1850, sold millions of dollars of their bonds, mostly in London, and have refused to redeem them.

These particular debts, all incurred for internal improvements, had nothing whatever to do with the Civil War or the "carpet bag" governments which followed. The debts were incurred long before. The loans were not made for corrupt or improper purposes, and the legality of the issues was not successfully disputed by any State.

The validity of the issues was upheld by the highest State courts. The bonds were sold at a high price to innocent purchasers. For example, Mississippi between 1831 and 1838 contracted two loans, the proceeds of which were used to the establishment of two banks. The first loan was for $2,000,000; the other for $5,000,000. The interest in arrears to the present date is $32,000,000. In 1841 Mississippi defaulted, and subsequently passed a law forbidding the recognition of the debts. The loans have remained in default for more than 90 years, and all attempts to obtain recognition of them from the State have failed.

Certain Northern States also borrowed abroad and later attempted to repudiate, but New York capitalists made common cause with the European investors and boycotted the offending States when they came for further loans. This forced the would-be welchers to settle in full. C. W. J.

Thanks From a Bus Driver.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Through the medium of your paper I would like to express my thanks as one of several hundred bus operators in Washington to the people who so willingly come to our assistance in time of storm or other trouble.

Whenever we get stuck in the snow or on ice they very kindly let us come into their homes with wet, dirty feet to use the telephone to call our garage and they often supply ashes to put under bus wheels to help in starting.

This is a service which may seem very small, but which really means a great deal. I am sure I can express the thanks of all the bus operators in the city to our helping public.

W. R. T. BUS OPERATOR.

Suggesting Sand for Slippery Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent sleet storm, with its accompanying accidents to citizens of this city, should be looked upon as a municipal hazard. The city should sand the sidewalks and do it promptly. Funds should be set aside by the street department for this purpose.

The slippery sidewalks need sand. Even the bus companies sent out trucks of sand to sand portions of the highway on which their buses skidded. The poor pedestrian must gamble with his life until sun or rising temperature melts the ice.

I would suggest that our street department officials make a study of the methods used in other cities on the question of the slippery pavement and give us the benefit of such knowledge obtained.

A TAXPAYER.

Favoring Government Ownership Of Public Utilities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the question of the consolidation of the Nation's communication service is being discussed, the time is ripe for a general demand for complete Government ownership instead of Government-controlled monopoly, which would only be a compromise.

A few years ago the only argument for continued private ownership of these companies was that the stockholders were benefited by it. But today, I doubt if the holders of Western Union stock, for instance, would mind being bought out by the Government, for it has been demonstrated that the holding of public utility stock is no guarantee of an income in time of depression. On the other hand, public ownership of the communication services would guarantee a dividend to every citizen of the country in the form of reduced rates and better service, while all surplus earnings would go into the United States Treasury and reduce taxes.

It is an encouraging fact that the chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, is known to favor public ownership of utilities, and that he comes from a State which has the lowest electric rates in the country because the large cities own their own power plants.

It seems to me that everyone in the country who would like to have cheaper telephone, telegraph and railroad rates, and who would like to see the Government collect the profits, which now go to officers and stockholders of the communication companies, should write to Senator Dill and tell him so.

In The Post of December 14, you say editorially, "There does not appear to be any considerable body of opinion in favor of Government ownership." It would be interesting if newspapers throughout the country would print ballots and ask the people to express their opinion regarding the three policies dealing with the communication agencies. I think that the result would prove that the newspapers and politicians are as far behind the real opinion of the people on this question as they were on prohibition.

Hospitalizing Cabinet Officers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with a great deal of interest, the article on December 13 by your correspondent, Mr. Felix Bruner, and I am glad that your paper is taking an active interest in how the taxpayer's money is being dispensed. Only yesterday I hear two Cabinet officers were being treated at Government hospitals for "nonservice connected disability," one at Walter Reed and another at the Naval Hospital.

If these gentlemen are unable to pay then the funds provided for the military establishment should be expended, but on the other hand, if they can afford to pay the price, why do they not patronize the city hospitals which need their help and not charge the poor, down-trodden veteran with something which he is not getting? It is unfair to the veteran to hospitalize Cabinet members, members of Congress, their families and employes when the veteran is unable to go into his own hospital.

Year after year numerous Government officials, their families and employes receive treatment at these veterans' hospitals at the expense of the veteran and when the annual reports of the Veterans' Administration are published to the country at large, the veteran gets the black eye.

Not being a man, I could not fight for my country, but I stood on the side lines on Pennsylvania avenue and with streaming eyes watched these men march off to make the country "safe for democracy." Now that many of them have returned, broken in mind and spirit, it is up to the patriotic citizens of the community in which they live to see that they get a square deal.

There is certainly no excuse for high-salaried political appointees sponging on the veterans when these officials are able to pay for treatment.

For the sake of humanity and in the name of justice—keep up your good work. LILLIAN MILLER.

The Quickest Way to Defeat Virtue Is to Make It Cost More

By Robert Quillen.

The American people, in the last normal year before the war, consumed approximately 145,000,000 gallons of hard liquor with the consent and blessing of the law. The consumption of illicit liquor, sold in violation of revenue laws, probably did not exceed 15,000,00 gallons.

It is commonly assumed that liquor consumption increased under prohibition, and officials interested in revenue expect this increase to be maintained

But they are inviting disappointment if they expect all liquor consumed after repeal to pay its lawful tax.

The cost of making a case of potable whisky is approximately $1.60. A case is three gallons, or 12 quarts. Interest on the invested money while the whisky is aging, plus barreling and labeling, will add at least $5.50 to the cost. The present Federal tax of $1.10 a gallon will add $3.30 more, thus making the total cost $10.40 a case.

But there is every reason to believe that the Federal tax will be increased to at least $2.50 a gallon, thus adding $4.20 to the cost of a case.

One State has already levied a floor tax of $2 a gallon, and it is quite probable that the other 19 States in which sale is permitted will do as much. This will add $6 more to the price of a case, making the total cost approximately $21. If these figures are correct, the cost of producing a gallon of legal liquor will be not less than $7.

Now consider the moonshiner. Given 75 pounds of sugar, two bushels of meal, two pounds of malt and six yeast cakes, he can produce 11 gallons of good "white mule" at a cost of $3.50. That means 50 cents a gallon.

The Nation's palate has been trained to accept unaged liquor, either white or colored.

Given an advantage of $6.50 the gallon in production costs, is there any reason to believe that the moonshiner will quit his calling?

If the people of America would not quit illegal liquor for the sake of law and order, they will not penalize themselves 700 per cent for the privilege of drinking liquor that is taxed.

The Once Over.

FIRESIDE ECONOMICS.

Popper, what does it mean when it says the dollar sinks?

Just what it says, my son; the dollar, er, er, well it just sinks.

Huh?

I say, where does the dollar sink when it sinks?

It sinks in Europe.

What part of Europe?

Oh, all parts, I guess. Run along, now, popper is reading.

* * * *

But when the dollar sinks in Europe who sinks it?

Nobody sinks it.

Well, what makes it sink?

It just sinks, that's all. Go out and see if the boy next door don't want to play kick the wicket.

But what does it sink from?

It sinks from a fixed point. Somebody's whistling for you.

What's the fixed point, popper?

Then when the dollar sinks it isn't a dollar any more?

That's the idea.

The paper says the dollar has sunk to 64 cents in Paris.

That's right. Go out and play before it gets dark.

* * * *

Why does it sink to 64 cents in Paris, popper?

Because, er, er, England being off the gold standard and the value of the British pound in terms of the American dollar being what it is and France being just across the channel, the franc . . . lissen, the boy across the street is calling you, I'm sure.

When the dollar sinks to 64 cents in Paris does it sink to 64 cents in America, too, popper?

No.

What stops it?

Huh?

I say, what stops it from sinking to 64 cents?

Nobody stops it. It just stops.

How?

Plop! . . . just like that. Plop!—and it's stopped. Please go away now like a good boy.

* * * *

Well, if the dollar is still worth a dollar over here, popper, who cares if it sinks to 64 cents in Europe?

People who do an international business, I guess.

Why do they care?

Because they have to collect in terms of the United States dollar. If they sell a bill of goods to somebody in Paris today with the dollar worth 64 cents at the rate of exchange they lose money if the dollar becomes worth only 55 cents by the time they collect or something.

Popper, who fixes the rate of exchange?

It's a tall man with pale blue eyes and a gray vest. Now run along.

* * * *

Popper?

What?

What's inflation?

Scat! Get outa here! Go out and play with the boy next door! And don't come back for a coupla years!

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

This romance first appeared in 1869, but it seems as if it were as old as literature. We feel that we have always been reading it, and that there could not have been a time when it did not exist. It belongs to the Anglo-Saxon race, as the Three Musketeers belong to the French. Yet at first Lorna Doone attracted no attention: the gradual dawn of its fame assured it of a long and cloudless day. In the preface to the twentieth edition the author wrote "what a lucky maid you are, my Lorna! When first you came from the Western Moors nobody cared to look at you."

One reason for its failure to attract attention may have been that the prevailing fashion of novels at that moment was realism; and in the preface to the first edition the author wrote, "This work is called a romance, because the incidents, characters, time and scenery are alike romantic." It is 100 per cent romance; a story of adventure and love. The pictures of the surrounding country are so well done that to visit North Devon in England today is like reading an illustrated edition of the book. One should certainly see those places; one may walk along the stream named Bagworthy Water and see the place where John Ridd looked into the eyes of the loveliest girl in the world. And the little church where they were married must be visited. It will be remembered that the villain Carver slipped into the church and shot the bride; she lingered for a page and a half and then recovered. The church is so small it is a wonder he did not blow her into a thousand pieces.

SANDPAPER.

Sandpaper is a misnomer, according to the Los Angeles Times. A writer in Scientific American says the average person may be surprised to learn that the fine abrasive particles on sandpaper are specially crushed flint or garnet, or are products of the modern electric furnace—aluminum oxide or silicon carbide. This is interesting to most of us, as sandpaper is used in every household. Sand is not efficient for sandpaper because most of it is waterworn and the particles have no sharp cutting edge. The first sandpaper, a crude product, was manufactured near Philadelphia 85 years ago.

Rum Tax Fight In Committee Set This Week

dent, who would be given authority to adjust liquor rates either up or down, down if necessary to cope drastically with illegal liquor traffic, up if more revenue were needed.

Committee sentiment last night inclined toward a $2.20 tax on liquor, as a compromise between the $2.60 sought by the interdepartmental committee, and the $1.50 to $1.75 asked by a substantial minority of the House group.

Taking broad exception to subcommittee proposals for tightening income tax laws, Mr. Emery and Mr. Seidman quoted Acting Secretary Morgenthau's testimony Friday that, "particularly in these times, legitimate business transactions should not be impeded by being driven to take uneconomic forms."

Both opposed arbitrary curtailment of depreciation deductions by 25 per cent, limitation of capital losses to capital gains, prohibition on carrying over partnership losses in individual returns, and elimination of consolidated returns, as proposed in the subcommittee report.

While expressing accord with the general purposes of the subcommittee, Mr. Seidman contended many of their provisions militate against capital goods industries, which he said can not be revived without an ample supply of long-term capital.

Church Lobbies Seek Boost.

In sharp contrast to their testimony were pleas for higher taxation in the higher income brackets voiced by representatives of the People's Lobby, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the National Catholic Welfare Council and the Central Conference of American Rabbis.

Dr. Goldstein, representing the last of these organizations, urged that the "taxation system be used to restore purchasing power and redistribute wealth, so every family may maintain a decent standard of living."

He suggested $25,000 as a minimum figure, above which all income should be confiscted or "conscripted." Proceeds, he said, should be used to finance the President's recovery program as an alternative to new bond issues.

Rev. R. A. McGowen, associate director of the National Catholic Welfare Council, urged that wealthy classes be reached through higher income taxes, and readjustment of the tax structure according to ability to pay.

The Rev. James Myers, industrial secretary of the Federal Council of Churches in America, took a similar position, holding "the problem of a wider and fairer distribution of wealth in this country can no longer be viewed only in the light of religious idealism or treated as an academic question."

Shift of Burden Cited.

Dr. Warne, of Amherst, said the Administration program has shifted the "bulk of the tax burden from income and corporation levies to specific commodity taxes, tariffs and processing taxes, increasing the burden on the small consumer."

Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the Peoples' Lobby, concluded the plea for redistribution of wealth through taxation.

"Congress should increase surtaxes and normal income tax rates to raise $2,000,000,000 more this year, and provide for confiscating income of wilfull evaders," he said.

Chairman Doughton said his committee will conclude hearings on income tax revision Thursday, "even if it is necessary to hold a night session."

Wrapping Time.

It's a busy day at our house with the Merry Christmas Day
Swinging just around the corner and not quite a week away.
There's the sound of snipping scissors, and a whispering overhead
And I know they're busy wrapping little gifts in paper red.
The house is full of mystery and magic, high and low,
And they're plainly up to something which they don't want me to know.

There's a hustle and a bustle and a scampering of feet,
Every time I cross the doorway someone hastens to retreat.
And they wink at one another every time that I draw near.
There's an air of great excitement, so I think it safe to say Something nice is going to happen when I wake on Christmas Day.

They wisely look me over, up and down from head to toe,
So I've gathered the suspicion this old tie is doomed to go.
Though I wouldn't dare to say it lest their feelings should be hurt
I've the notion Christmas morning I shall get another shirt.
Oh, I like the Christmas season, like to hear the church bells chime, tion of the policy and the prices, was not to be found at or near the scene.
Best of all I like the secrets of the busy wrapping time.

Jones later reported the R. F. C. had contracted to date for 469,491 ounces of domestic gold at an aggregate cost of $15,682,000. He preserved the usual secrecy about the amount of R. F. C. money spent or allocated to foreign purchases, which inferentially approximate $35,000,000, since the R. F. C. has used up $50,000,000 to date in gold purchasing.

Treasury Makes "Investment."

Morgenthau reported the Treasury, which has supplanted the Reserve System recently as a buyer of Government securities, purchased $6,600,000 of Government bonds for "investment" last week, and $10,000,000 more for the sinking fund, this total of $16,600,000 comparing with only $7,000,000 the week before and only $2,000,000 the week earlier. However, the Treasury does not represent that these purchases were to support the Government bond market. They are described simply as investment operations.

The 5-cent raise in the gold price appeared to be prompted, among other things, by a desire to show the policy is unchanged, regardless of sporadic criticisms such as the Brookings Institute's attack on the theory that increasing gold prices automatically increases commodity prices. The champions of the gold policy retort that they never pretended there was any automatic relationship, and that attempts to reach conclusions as yet about the gold operations are premature.

Nor has the National Economy League's petition, fearing for the Nation's credit unless extraordinary outlays are drastically curbed, added any detectable deterrant to the advocates of continued heavy spending.

Douglas Due to Fail.

Budget Director Douglas is battling for restraint, and the petition supported his view. But it is already apparent that he is to be overruled, although it is not yet clear whether the resulting budget will be intolerably high from his standpoint.

The view echoed from the White House is that Government credit not only is secure, that it can stand many more billions than the prospective load, but that there appears to be fairly easy sailing through the winter, with civil and public works outlays caring for most of the unemployed, with agricultural advances bettering the agrarian situation, with general business picking up, and with optimism spreading. The dominant note in the Administration is one of confidence and cheerfulness. The disposition is to take none too seriously warnings or prophecies of future monetary or budgetary crises.

"We won't ever have to issue printing-press money," he remarked.

He is to make a speech in New York tomorrow night to expound his plan for the 50-cent dollar and the Treasury's impounding of some $4,000,000,000 of "profit" on gold taken over from reserve banks. He means to fire back at the Brookings Institution, incidentally.

While Administration ideas are not yet clarified on new legislation, the President's advisers on matters monetary and legal, are studying both the economic and political field with a view to concentrating further discretionary powers in his hands and avoiding mandatory action by Congress.

It is assumed the President will require new powers if he is to adopt any of a number of courses, such as a trial of the Warren-Fisher commodity-dollar ideas, or the John Maynard Keynes theories—which have long interested the White House—for managing credit and currency.

It is not a remote possibility that another omnibus bill may result, embracing as great a variety of powers as the Thomas amendment, which permits devaluation of the gold content of the dollar by as much as 50 per cent, but is of doubtful validity for experimenting with the variable gold dollar, or commodity dollar, ideas of Profs. Warren and Fisher. Also it is by no means unlikely that the new legislation will give the President an even firmer grip upon the Federal Reserve System, involving a complete overthrow of that system as it was created and formerly operated.

Outlook Is Uncertain.

The range of possibilities is vast, as the numerous advisers, with varied ideas, conjure with the future and fate of the dollar; what they will agree upon in the way of new legislation is, at this time, beyond conjecture. On one point there is agreement, however. The new powers will abolish the gold standard as it used to be; there will be no future gold coinage, and there probably will be a request for authority to establish a bullion system.

Working away on next year's budget and its related taxation problem, Treasury officers had little to say yesterday regarding the National Economy League petition, beyond a reiteration of their belief in the continued soundness of the Government's credit, according to the Associated Press.

The daily Treasury statement of December 15, published yesterday, showed, meanwhile, a $908,000,000 deficit for the fiscal year so far, as compared with $1,581,000,000 for the corresponding period a year ago. Expenses listed as emergency accounted for a little more than the entire deficit.

The mid-month statement of public debt receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year to December 15 showed borrowings of $5,611,000,000 and retirements totaling $4,309,000,000, an increase in the public debt of $1,300,000,000. During the same period a year ago the Nation's indebtedness increased $1,400,000,000.

Court, Wife Spurn Drapes as Alimony

Interior Decorator Then Is Sentenced to Jail.

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—Into divorce court came Robert Archibald today carrying a pair of green drapes. Archibald is an interior decorator.

The alimony bill of Mrs. Marie Archibald had reached $722 at the rate of $12.50 a week, and Archibald offered the drapes in lieu of cash, hoping thereby to evade the county jail.

Mrs. Archibald wanted no drapes, neither would the court decree them legal tender. So Archibald moved today to the county jail for six months, and Judge Robert suggested he take the drapes along "for a more homelike atmosphere."

Second Offenders Face New Penalty

"Tightening Up" Promised Here by Prosecutors.

Assistant United States Attorneys David A. Hart and Roger Robb warned yesterday they will "tighten up" on prosecution of Police Court criminal offenses by invoking the second conviction clause of the District of Columbia Criminal Code.

The clause provides that persons convicted a second time of criminal offenses may be sentenced to a fine and jail sentences 50 per cent greater than the maximum penalty of the first offense.

The law applies to gaming, larceny, disorderly and vice cases.

adduced that he was an interested party.

"Who suggested the name of former Judge Cooke, an Insull lawyer, as coreceiver with Mr. Fentress?" Ettelson asked Leavell.

"I believe it was Mr. Insull, sr.," Leavell responded.

"Did Mr. Fentress say he wanted to be sole receiver?"

"Yes," said Leavell. "Mr. Fentress, after we had succeeded in getting his consent, laid down the condition that he would accept only as sole receiver. Mr. Insull said he felt someone from the companies should act as coreceiver. Mr. Insull said he wanted Mr. Cooke to act as such. Mr. Fentress agreed."

Owen D. Young Present.

Abner J. Stillwell, executive vice president of the Continental Bank, also told of the precollapse conferences, some of them in New York and some here, and said Owen D. Young, chairman of the General Electric Co., attended occasionally, as his company was a large creditor of the Insull firms.

Stillwell said Insull, sr., was asked to resign as coreceiver with Edward N. Hurley and Charles A. McCulloch for Middle West Utilities about 60 days after their appointment.

"Mr. Bruce Johnstone, one of the attorneys for the receivers," Stillwell testified, "said he had become aware of what appeared to be an abuse of corporate practice on the part of the Middle West Utilities Co., and suggested that Mr. Insull should resign. I discussed the matter with Mr. Brown, of the First National Bank, and others, and it was agreed that Mr. Insull should resign as coreceiver."

No Mention of Flight.

"Was it also agreed," Ettelson asked, "that Mr. Insull should leave the country?"

"It was not."

Opera Star Sings Tale of Woe—'Insull Made Me Buy His Stock'

Took Liberty Bonds and Earnings, $500,000 All in All.

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—Rosa Raisa, grand opera star, said today that Samuel Insull, sr., persuaded her and her husband, Giacomo Rimini, to invest their savings and earnings in stock of his utility financing companies.

When they refused to buy more, she said, they were ostracized from the Insull-Controlled Chicago Civic Opera.

Mme. Raisa said that at one time Insull showed her she had "paper profits" of $500,000.

She said a "very prominent Chicago business man" came to her in 1926 as Insull's representative and asked her to buy Insull stock.

"I felt honored," she said. "Every one looked upon Mr. Insull as the god of American business.

"I went to Mr. Insull's private office and gave him a check for $100,000. Every year after that my husband and I put $50,000 or more, all of my earnings, into the stock.

"One year he asked me for more money to invest. I had $50,000 in Liberty bonds. He smiled and said: 'Good, good; they are just like gold.' So I invested them, too."

Rum Label War Rages in N. Y.

Health Officer Says Much Whisky Sold Found to Be "Imitation."

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Pressing his campaign against subterfuge in the selling of whisky, Dr. Shirley Wynne, city health commissioner, declared today he would seek a law to make failure of specifically labeling liquor punishable as a misdemeanor.

The health commissioner, before his conference today with distillers' representatives and Edward P. Mulrooney, State alcohol "czar," disclosed that an analysis of 25 samples of liquor taken from restaurants showed 40 per cent of it was "imitation whisky."

This brought a prediction that Dr. Wynne would issue a "black list" after the conference, but none was made public.

Dr. Wynne said he would lay his request for a labeling provision in the sanitary code before the Board of Health within the next few days.

Long Air Tour Tonight's Topic In Travel Talk

Pan-American Voyage by Plane to Be Described and Illustrated.

Rex Martin, assistant director of the Bureau of Aeronautics, Department of Commerce, will introduce William J. Van Dusen as the speaker in the seventh of a series of 20 travel talks being sponsored by The Washington Post, at the Masonic Auditorium, New York avenue at Thirteenth street northwest, at 8:15 tonight.

Mr. Martin is in direct charge of all United States airways and Mr. Van Dusen is a representative of the Pan-American Airways system whose route encircles the entire South American continent and connects 30 foreign countries with the United States by air.

The subject of tonight's lecture is "Wings Over the Americas," and Mr. Van Dusen's thrilling account of an aerial journey over the magnificent scenery of South America will be supplemented by motion pictures showing primitive jungles, tropical seas, snow-capped mountains and the busy modern cities of Latin America.

The purpose of The Washington Post in sponsoring these events is to acquaint its readers with international news sources which serve The Post through the Associated Press and other news-gathering facilities. Of particular interest on tonight's program will be the plane's stopover in Cuba, with pictures of the country and its people, which will be doubly significant in the light of current happenings in the island republic.

The lectures also serve to introduce modern methods of transportation and afford a means of comparison between the customs of foreign countries and those of this country. Although educational in their scope and purpose, each lecture is also designed to provide delightful entertainment.

Masonic Auditorium doors and box office will be opened at 7:30 tonight and early purchase of seats at 25 cents is advised because of the great interest aroused by previous travelogues of this interesting series.

Two new Lincoln motor cars, each powered by a single 150-horsepower, 12-cylinder V-type engine, are presented for 1934 by the Lincoln Motor Co. and are now on display at the Warfield Motor Co., 1132 Connecticut avenue.

Twenty-one body types are listed in the new Lincoln series—eight standard types on the 136-inch wheelbase chassis, three standard and ten custom body types on the 145-inch wheelbase chassis. The custom types are the creations of five master coach makers, Brunn, Judkins, Willoughby, Dietrich and LeBaron.

Body designs have been refined and modernized and the bodies equipped with a controlled clear-vision ventilation system. Body lines retain the flowing grace of the streamline design. The cars are low and sleek in appearance, proportioned wholly in the modern conception.

Hopkins Plans To "Fire" CWA Job Jumpers

Won't Tolerate Changes From Industry to Relief Work, He Says.

Persons quitting regular jobs to take civil works employment will be discharged when discovered, Harry Hopkins, administrator, warned yesterday.

The charge that C. W. A. wages are "stealing" men from regular industry has been recurring recently. Hopkins branded it as "principally a tempest in a teapot," but promised drastic action whenever such a case is found.

The relief administrator said most charges were founded on mere assertion, but added that yesterday a specific instance had been reported. He said a tree surgery company had complained its workers were quitting to take C. W. A. places at $5 more a week.

To "Fire" Tree Surgeons.

Hopkins said he had requested the complainant to forward the names of the employes involved, and that he would discharge them from C. W. A. rolls. Asked what these persons could do if they couldn't get their original jobs back, he declared that was "their lookout."

C. W. A.'s weekly pay roll is approximately $50,000,000 a week, Hopkins said. Whether the program could be doubled, as suggested by a conference of mayors last week, depends upon funds, he pointed out.

Hopkins revealed he hopes to abolish the distinction between Civil Works Administration and Civil Works Service. Under the latter are included projects which can not legally be put under C. W. A., such as sewing rooms and projects for unemployed actors.

November relief rolls advanced 8 per cent in November, Hopkins reported, a small gain as compared to previous years.

Toledo Plants Complain.

Toledo, Ohio, Dec. 18 (AP).—The seemingly competitive force of the C. W. A. as a possible booster of wage levels was exemplified here today when several Toledo factories complained some of their employes were quitting to take jobs on public works projects.

Although the factories are paying wage scales conforming to Federal-approved industrial codes, the local C. W. A. rate of 50 cents an hour is higher. The factories pay 38 to 40 cents an hour for an eight-hour day. The C. W. A. workers have a six-hour day.

The complaints of men quitting regular jobs to join the C. W. A. were received by the organization's complaint committee from the Spicer Manufacturing Co., the Valve Bag Co., the Gendron Wheel Co., and the Toledo Metal Wheel Co.

Board Refutes Cafe's Claims On Blue Eagle

Insignia on View When Complaint Was Filed, Walter Asserts.

The claim of S. G. Hatch, proprietor of the Idaho Cafe, 814 Seventeenth street northwest, that he never obtained a Blue Eagle and therefore was unable to surrender the emblem when ordered to do so, was refuted yesterday by Maj. Raymond J. Walter, executive officer of the District NRA Compliance Board.

"At the time the complaint was received, a Blue Eagle was being displayed by the cafe," Maj. Walter said. "The complaint was made by a woman employe who claimed to have worked in excess of the number of hours allowed by the President's reemployment agreement, and for less than the minimum wage. We have evidence that this woman worked 64 hours in four days, which is a violation of the District law prohibiting a female from working more than 8 hours in one day."

Hinting that the cafe Blue Eagle may have been destroyed after a letter of complaint was received from the compliance board, Maj. Walter said that such action does not exempt an employer from the reemployment agreement.

Maj. Walter said that it is possible Hatch did not actually sign the P. R. A. but "inherited" the eagle from a former owner of the cafe. If this was the case, it does not absolve Hatch from failing to comply with the code, Walter said.

Hatch will have to pay back wages that are due and appeal to the board before he can fly a Blue Eagle again, Maj. Walter announced.

"We do not consider this a vindictive actiop," he said, "but it is necessary if employers who are complying are to be protected."

No End of Books

Christmas Gifts: A Novel About the Brave Days of Old Austria, Which Vanished Away, and Another About the Feverish Times in 1870 Paris.

According to the pretty theories of social historians, if America and the rest of the world are now in a ferment of change, in a clear-eyed recognition of human problems and a spirited governmental attack upon them, we should at the same time be furnished with a literature equally self-conscious and self-determining. If our politics are wideawake to the hour, our novels should also concern themselves with the life opening at hand fresh and new.

But whether the theorists or the times, the results are certainly out of joint. For our novels are anything but novels in the straight-forward and contemporary sense of the word. They are sectional, or specialistic, or historical. During the past year the merest minority of them have stood up straight and foregone the crutches of "local color," dialect, and research into the archives of history. Run them over in your mind. Can you name three recent novels which deal with the normal and central in present-day American life? I can't. The lack goes back several years' time. Even the Pulitzer Prize committee, men who possess instructions to this end in Pulitzer's will, have had to bestow their honors upon novels about Peru, the Southwest Indians, and China!

But what I write here is an observation, not a complaint. The writers who are to work with the materials of our day will arrive in due course. In the meantime, even though literary art is expended on alien subjects, it is none the less adept and moving.

From Joseph Roth's dual inheritance, Austrian and Russian Jew, he has saved a single flame of nostalgic patriotism for the Austrian Empire, the Austria of Franz Joseph. "Radetzky March" (Viking, $2.50), is a swift and active novel of the decaying grandeur centered in the old emperor, from the battle of Solferino to his death at the outbreak of the great war.

The story narrates the lives of three men in the Trotta family—the grandfather, who saved Franz Joseph's life at Solferino and was given a baronetcy; the father, who grew up in the shadow of a national hero, and Carl Joseph Trotta, chief character of the novel, who watched the world of orthodox patriotism melt away. They were all in the army; the army was life and breath to them. To the two elder Trotttas this was a solid and stable fact. Before them always was the picture of the emperor, the war lord, dressed in the white of a field marshal, and a great crimson sash, wearing the Order of the Fleece. But to Carl Joseph, nervous and sallow, involved with gambling debts and affairs with women, that symbol came to mean less and less. Only when its power reached out to save him from disgrace could he feel a resurging glow of security. Then, in a twinkling, came the murder at Sarajevo. Carl Joseph, grandson of the hero of Solferino, died with two water buckets in his hand—an irony made solemn only by the immediate deaths of the emperor and of his father. The old Austria was gone.

Roth has told the story simply. The inner decay which matched the outer is described with color, often flaring gorgeously into that romantic radiance of the Austria of hussars and wine and pretty women and Strauss waltzes. But we are not allowed to forget the other side—the polyglot peasants, the domestic strife, the poverty and the unrest. "Radetzky March" is a grand book for winter reading.

* * * *

With a far more glittering pen, Herbert Gorman writes of the turbulent days of the siege of Paris and the 1871 commune in "Jonothan Bishop" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50). Jonothan, a cosmopolitan youth and a graduate of Harvard, finds himself at the center of one of the most exciting episodes in history. The downfall of the empire of Napoleon III and the uprising of the Paris mob flutter him about like a cork in a millpond.

Mr. Gorman grows as excited as the reader. His style is brilliant, flashing with quick glimpses into the heart of the scenes. And these form an amazingly full panorama of the times—court and slums, battle and chamber of state, boudoir and cul-de-sac. The novel has all the stir and sweep of "The Tale of Two Cities," and in many passages is distinctly reminiscent of that canvas of the first commune.

Through it all the young, democratic and idealistic Jonothan takes his way, rather naively and yet with undiminished ardor for the cause of liberty. He meets the D'Ezes, father and son; Mme. Zinh, beautiful, placid and subtle, with whom he falls wildly in love, and Gaultier de Saint-Just, the mysterious spider at the heart of the commune's web. Character after character passes across the stage, all illumined as by a lightning flash. Mr. Gorman sees and feels with great intensity. His pen is strong enough to carry the impressions sharp and undimmed to the reader. Here is a novel as full of life, intrigue and action as any which came from the hand of Dumas. Read it, and see how well our novelists are doing with other lands and other times.

THEODORE HALL.

The Clock Turns Back in Menu Styles to Good Old Lobster Newburgh and Nesselrode Pudding

By Ann Barrett.

"I eat gobs of lobster a la Newburgh," says Mae West. "It's part of my training." Which brings up to the point that you'd better look to your own Newburghs and Nesselrode puddings. That is—if you expect to round out your 1934 parties as alluringly as a Lady Lou gown over the Mae West curves. Because the current fancy for turning the clock back to the early 1900's has given a new vogue to the old-fashioned dishes of that period.

(If real wines are not available for these dishes, wine-flavorings may be had from any good grocer. Salted wine-flavorings for soups, meats and fish. And highly-sweetened wine flavorings for desserts.)

Besides all the Newburghs (lobster, shrimp, oyster, chicken and turkey) good rarebits are back in the limelight again. And desserts such as cottage pudding with wine sauce; wine and nut jelly with whipped cream; Nesselrode pudding; plum pudding "flamed" in brandy; and that gorgeous old English concoction (misnamed trifle) that starts with wine-drenched sponge cake in the bottom of the bowl, works its way up through raspberry jam, crumbled macaroons, chopped almonds, smooth-as-velvet custard, and finally appears at the top of the dish crowned with whipped cream and cherries.

Time-honored and luscious dishes—let the curves fall where they may!

Lobster a la Newburgh.

Now for that elegant and seductive dish—lobster a la Newburgh. First wash and slice about one-half pound mushroom caps. Put these on to cook with one-half cup of milk and one-third teaspoon salt. Cook gently 15 minutes. Then put two and a half cups cooked lobster on to simmer (in another saucepan or in chafing dish) with two and a half tablespoons butter, one-quarter teaspoon salt and a quarter teaspoon paprika. Cook till butter is melted. Then blend in three tablespoons flour thoroughly. Next, stir in the mushrooms with whatever liquid is left on them. Add one and three-quarters cups medium-heavy cream and the yolks of three hard-cooked eggs put through sieve or ricer. Stir constantly till mixture thickens. Just before serving add one-third cup sherry. Serve garnished with points of crisp, freshly-made and buttered toast and pass extra toast or crisp rolls.

(Note: If you don't want to delay the joy of eating this, by having to cook the lobster yourself, you can buy it in the shell already cooked. Or easier still, look for it quick-frozen and already picked from the shell. As for the making of this dish, you can do it in the kitchen in an ordinary double boiler, of course. But table cookery is so fashionable I hope you'll be doing it in a chafing dish. If you haven't one—perhaps you'd better write a letter to Santa Claus.

Nesselrode Pudding.

Nesselrode pudding, favorite company desert of an earlier day, starts with 4 tablespoons sherry poured over 4 tablespoons each chopped candied cherries, chopped candied pineapple and 1-3 cup chopped marrons (preserved chestnuts). Let this mixture stand while you make the rest of the dessert, as follows: Scald 1 cup milk in top of double boiler, and stir into it 2 beaten egg yolks first mixed well with 6 tablespoons sugar. Cook this over hot water till thickened. Then stir in 1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin first softened in 2 tablespoons cold water. Let mixture cool. Then fold into it the fruit and wine mixture and 2 egg whites beaten stiff. Next whip 1 cup heavy cream and fold in. Then turn the mixture into a mold, seal the cover on with paraffin or vegetable shortening, and bury in ice and salt (equal parts). Or turn into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator.

That'll be ice cream with a flavor! Served up in the bountiful old-time manner, it'll have the support of a good piece of cake alongside.

Flaming Plum Pudding.

In case you'd like to bring your plum pudding to table in a flame of glory this year, here's how to do it. First bring 1 cup sugar and ½ cup water to a boil and boil 5 minutes. Then add 1 teaspoon lemon juice and ½ cup brandy and cook till mixture becomes rich brown. Pour this over the whole hot plum pudding when you're ready to serve it. Then, just as you take it to the dining room (the flame soon burns out) light the brandy sauce. That's a custom that dates farther back than any of us can remember. Back to the time of the Yule log and the boar's head, in fact.

Christmas Menu May Offer Beef In Place of Fowl

Roast Beef With Yorkshire Pudding Made Famous by Dickens.

Along with all the joys of the Yuletide season, Christmas brings the task of planning and preparing the dinner for that very special occasion. Since it must be the very nicest dinner of the year, a few suggestions may be useful.

The following menu for the Christmas dinner is built around roast beef and Yorkshire pudding, made famous for that occasion by Dickens.

Christmas Menu.

Consomme Royalle
Celery Nuts Olives
Christmas Roast Beef With Yorkshire Pudding
Browned Potatoes
Brussel Sprouts With Chestnuts
Grapefruit Salad Cranberry Ice
Hot Rolls and Butter
Mince Pie Coffee

Christmas Roast Beef.

2 or 3 rib standing roast
½ cup raw cranberries
Salt
Pepper

Sprinkle the roast with salt, allowing ½ teaspoon for each pound. Place the roast in an open pan without adding any water and with the fat side up. As the fat melts and cooks out it will baste the meat. Place the meat in a hot oven (500-525 degrees F.). Sear for 20 or 30 minutes until lightly browned. Rapidly reduce the temperature to about 350 degrees F., and continue cooking until the roast has reached the desired degree of doneness. Allow 16 minutes to the pound for cooking a rare roast, 22 minutes to the pound for a medium roast and 30 minutes to the pound for a well-done roast. Decorate attractively with raw cranberries stuck on with toothpicks. Garnish with parsley and surround with squares of Yorkshire pudding.

Yorkshire Pudding.

1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
2 eggs

Beat the eggs, add the milk and beat in the flour and salt with an egg beater. Half an hour before time to serve the roast, pour the batter into the bottom of the roaster and the wire rack holding the meat, or if you wish, cover the bottom of two bread pans with beef fat tried out from the roast and pour into these. Be sure there is at least 1-3 inch of drippings in the bottom of the pan. Place in the oven and bake. Remove the meat and brown the pudding in a hot oven just before serving. Cut into squares and serve with the meat.

The Family Marketer

Unsweetened Grape Juice and Fruitized Cereal Offer Variety.

"Why," asked the Marketer, "should people drink unsweetened grape juice?"

"It is valuable for reducing diets, and for pepole who need iron," explained the store lady. "Also, it is a very delicious drink. You see, the juice is made from grapes that have reached the proper stage of ripeness, they are pressed very carefully, and the result is a nutritious and satisfying beverage."

"Sounds good," observed the Marketer. She has found some grape juices much too sweet and this variety seems to be the solution of the problem.

"How much does the grape juice cost?"

"Only 20 cents a pint, or 35 cents a quart."

A new kind of cereal, made of wheat offers a change in the breakfast menu. It is like an unrefined cream of wheat, with the added wheat germ which makes it more healthful. To give an element of glamour to the grain, raspberry flavor has been added. It is classified as a "fruitized" cereal, and costs 25 cents for a 20-ounce package.

Many people like to use whole wheat flour. Stone ground flour is 50 cents for 5 pounds. Cracked wheat for breakfast food, 12 cents a pound or three pounds for 20 cents. At this same shop you can get soy-bean flour, which is good for an acid condition.

Here is something that will be a boon to people on a vegetable diet. A sausage made not of meat but of vegetables. It is flavored and prepared to make a delicious meat substitute.

Dried vegetables are essential in supplying iron in the blood, and make very good soups as well. The Marketer found a shop in which lentils are 10 cents a pound. Would some one like some lentil soup? Salt pork chopped fine and fried slightly in a pan will add an interesting flavor to lentil, lima bean or split pea soup.

Carrots in the market stall are 10 cents a bunch, broccoli 20 cents a bunch, and brussels sprouts 20 cents a box. Tokay grapes are 10 cents a pound. The croquettes in today's menu will use up the last of the le o' lamb planned for Sunday.

Dinner for Four at 85 Cents.

Lamb Croquettes Baked Potatoes
Diced Carrots
Bread Butter
Milk Tea or Coffee
Tokay Grapes

Ingredients, amount and cost:

Croquettes	.45
Potatoes	.10
Carrots, 2 bunches	.10
Bread, 1-3 loaf	.10

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

A Leprosy Treatment.

Leprosy is accepted by health officers as of minor importance. To begin with there is not much of it. Health officials know of lepers who have lived for years in some contact with other people without spreading the disease. One man with leprosy served as coachman for a prominent man for years. The fact is, leprosy is very feebly contagious and, for that reason, health officers are not greatly interested in it.

Nevertheless, a number of years ago it was thought best for the United States to establish a colony for lepers and to get into it all those afflicted with the disorder. This Government colony was established in Louisiana, and every leper known to be such, and living anywhere in the continental confines, was eligible for residence there.

The plan has been a success. The disease has not spread to the people who live in the country round about. The physicians and nurses who live in the colony have not contracted the disease. A moderate number of lepers have been cured, and the disease has undergone a substantial decline in prevalence in those sections of the country where it appeared to have a foothold.

There is the promise that the policy, carried out as it has been for a dozen years, will virtually eliminate the disease from the United States within a half century. But we are impatient. We want quicker action if it can be had. Those who are afflicted want a cure and they want it now. A cure, discovered in the next generation, would be a fine thing, but not for those who are now in trouble.

Preparations made from the chalmoogra oil have been in use for the cure of leprosy. We are losing faith in it. Cures are reported, but we hear the opinion that they were the result of improved care rather than the oil.

Rather Large Dose.

B. D. writes: Would three drops of tincture of iodine in a glass of water three times a day be injurious to an adult?

Reply.

Probably not, although the dose is a large one. We need iodine, but a little goes a long way. Fortunately we do not absorb all we swallow. It is easier to get the horse to the trough than it is to make him drink.

New Make-up Gives Luminous Effect

Iridescent Eye Shadow Produces Glamor.

If you want to look radiant, scintillating, queenly at holiday parties—in accord with the bejewelled, glittering mode this season your make-up, too, must be dramatic, glamorous and luminous.

The new glamorous make-up is based on the artistic principle of highlights and shadows. First, a smooth, mat-like effect for the entire surface of the face is achieved with a foundation in a pearly cream of lilies tone. Then, come the highlights.

Especially important to create highlights is the use of luminous iridescent eyeshadow, in blue, blue-green, green, gray, violet and gold and silver. The colored ones are flecked with silver and gold, even as gowns are flecked with brilliants. Eyes sparkle luminously and appear larger and langorous, from beneath iridescent eyeshadow. Lashes are made to appear long and silky with Persian mascara. Then, with a little gold or silver eyeshadow on the finger, the lashes are winked against it until the points glitter in the light. Iridescent eyeshadow can also be used on the eyebrows to make them sparkle ever so subtly, or an eyelash grower and darkener can be used on lashes and brows to add luster.

Lips, too, must shine with a vivacious red poppy or red geranium tint, and checks glow in a matching hue. Artfully applied, rouge, lipstick, powder and eye make-up can do much to lend balance and drama to the entire glittering ensemble.

Italy's Bachelors Must Marry to Live

Taxation Makes Existence Dependent on Wedlock.

Rome—Italy's bachelors have been literally shaking in their boots since the report got around that Mussolini is determined to drive them into marriage.

They have for a long time been held up to public scorn, taxed and otherwise made uncomfortable, but if the Duce's intentions have been interpreted accurately single life is apt to become unbearable.

Il Duce is said to have said—that is the way such rumors go around in Italy—that the coming year is going to be "hard on bachelors."

There will be no confirmation, nor any effective denial, until Mussolini gets ready to discuss the subject more fully. A recent rumor that Fascist party executives who insist on remaining single will be forced to resign added considerably to their discomfort. It has since been denied, but the fact became known that there is an unwritten understanding to fill party posts with married men when they become vacant.

The bachelors seriously fear that their taxation will be increased in such proportion as to make existence dependent upon marriage. All single men over 25 must pay a special tax under existing regulations.

What Today Means

"Sagittarius."

If December 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 5 p. m. and from 9 to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10 a. m. and from 2 to 3:30 p. m.

In an unguarded moment some one will "slip something over" on you and it will more than likely cost you some money. If you are engaged to be married and have been having trouble with the loved one, do not be surprised if on this date you suddenly find yourself disengaged. Influences operating on this date will tend to break up all verbal agreements.

The child born on this December 19 will not be one to let strangers interfere at all with its affairs. It will not hesitate to talk right back to them and will give them as good as they send. Inclined to be impertinent even to its parents, but this independent spirit should not be too greatly curbed. Will get along well with those of its own age and will more than likely be the leader of "the gang."

Born on December 19, it is possible that you are the type of person who must always have some one to lean on heavily. You require some one to tell your troubles to and some one who in turn will reassure you, encourage you and give you the affection that you require. If you are fortunate to marry some one of great strength you will get along fairly well. You meet people rather well and get along with them. You do not show your weak side to the average person who cimes along, and more than likely people rate you higher than you deserve. You seldom rub people the wrong way, and when you do, you are quick to make apologies and seek their good graces again. You can be very stubborn at times and when you find yourself with your back to the wall almost anything can be expected of you.

If December 19 is the date of your birth, you are a very curious person and entirely too much inclined to "nose" into the affairs of others. You are rather an avaricious person and place entirely too much stress on the importance of money. You are selfish and nothing hurts you more than to have to part with your money for things out of the ordinary, even though they be necessities. You will not have much to contribute to this world at large or to the few friends that you have. You will make a good parent, but one not terribly interested in your offspring.

Successful people born on December 19:

Reginald C. Vanderbilt, capitalist.
Minnie Maddern Fiske, actress.
Ambrose Swasey, manufacturer.
George E. Merrill, educator.
Jane C. Croly (Jenny June), author.

Kansas City Tries Music On Pay-as-You-Go Plan

Kansas City, Dec. 19.—After years of costly and unsuccessful attempts Kansas City is about to realize its ambition for a symphony orchestra through a new musical organization operating on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

The Kansas City Philharmonic, managed by its conductor, Karl Krueger, enjoys no financial guarantees, subsidies or endowments from sponsors. Its sole income is from season and single admission tickets.

Nearly 4,000 persons listened to the first concert of the season in Convention Hall. Before the second concert the management found it necessary to add almost 500 seats to accommodate music lovers desiring to attend.

What's in Fashion?

Directed by Amos Parrish.

New York, Dec. 19.—If you're in the dark about what to give, let's have a little light on the subject of lamps . . . one of the most popular gifts of all. More and more it is the fashion to turn out the top lights and turn on the lamps for coziness. So they are needed at every spot where there's reading, writing or home-work arithmetic to be done.

Lamps today are specially designed not only to fit in with the various period themes illustrated by furniture, but also with their special use in mind.

So you'll find lamps which light directly, throwing their beam exactly in the spot to be lighted. Or lamps which light indirectly, throwing their beam up to the ceiling and giving a softer light on your work.

There are endless numbers of Early American and Colonial lamps. Brass and pewter oil-font types, copies of old hobnail glass lamps, lamps in shapes of old mugs, floor lamps with three-legged stool bases and adaptations of old candle stands.

Eighteenth Century Types.

The eighteenth century types are just as numerous in alabaster, porcelain, pottery and bronze to go with all the Chippendale, Sheraton, Queen Anne and Adam types of furniture.

Into this group come the Chinese lamps with porcelain bases mounted on teakwood stands and topped off with plain or pleated taffeta shades in light tan or off-white.

Three Candle Lights.

One of the newest lamps...not new in design, for it was used in the eighteenth century, but new in use...is the girandole. Or we should say, girandoles, since they are usually used in pairs. One is sketched at the right center.

At the end of a mantel or on the hall table these sparkling lights are at their handsomest. Three electric candles are posed on graceful arms, the space between filled with twinkly crystal prisms in the shape of leaves and flowers.

Sometimes these prisms are of amber or amethyst glass. And then they reflect the light in most interesting colors.

Washington Women in Welfare Work

Mrs. Herbert C. Woolley Devoted to the Work of Travelers' Aid.

Because of the diversified character of work accomplished by the Travelers Aid Society, Mrs. Herbert C. Woolley, a member of the board of that organization, devotes most of her welfare time to the society. She feels that it more nearly exemplifies the real spirit of social work, which is to aid everybody, regardless of race, color or creed, to every possible extent.

Mrs. Woolley is also honorary chairman of the rooms registry committee of the Young Women's Christian Association, which locates carefully inspected rooms at reasonable prices for girls and women who come alone to Washington. This rooms registry service maintains a list of homes which are visited by volunteer workers and which pass the inspection of these workers before they are listed at the Y. W. C. A. for best homes for strangers. This work requires considerable attention, but Mrs. Woolley still finds the time to devote most of her welfare activities to the Travelers' Aid, of which she says:

"I am particularly interested in the Travelers Aid Society because it is one society that aids every one. Race, color, creed or financial standing means nothing to the Travelers' Aid if its workers can be of assistance to any one.

"Rich man, poor man, runaway boys and girls, transients, residents, single folk, married folk, foreigners and Americans, all can apply to the Travelers' Aid for assistance.

"Its station work is recognized as being one of the most important organizations that aid the traveler, whether it be by air, rail or road."

Chintz Tea Sets And Novelties Nice for Gifts

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Buying gifts for women who already have everything is simplified by an F street gift shop. The first floor dazzles with its outlay of novelties ranging from fancy matches to fancier soap. The upstairs department with its enchanting china display is a true teaser to pockets full of pennies.

A certain cabinet catches one's eye half way up the stairs. It's filled with Chintz tea sets of the most fascinating old English designs. There's the Warwick pattern, the Cherry, and the Cambridge. These sets provide a service for four, including four cups and saucers, a sugar bowl and cream pitcher. The patterns, of course, come in open dinner wear which can be ordered on short notice.

Knockabout bags, 1 foot high and 1½ feet long, will do a lot to lighten the shopper's burden. Their very ample proportions will hold a full-sized load and provide a delightfully easy way of carrying it.

The bags are made of that new wavel cloth which looks very much like suede. A zipper top slides-to and safeguards the contents from spilling out. The bags come in brown, tan, black, blue and green.

A little old lady with powdery white hair, a high lace collar, and a black taffeta dress is the very proper person for one of the Old English Lavendar gift sets. They contain a bottle of cologne—almost as strong as perfume—a jar of talcum, a cake of soap and a box of face powder. The brown and gold box in which they're packed suggests the quality of the gifts within.

Housewives who figure their age at 40 can pull it down to 30 in a scant half hour if they go on the theory that a woman is as old as she looks.

A new cosmetic company, a company not widely known, but highly regarded, offers a free facial to every woman who is interested enough to call in for it. She can sit right there at home in the big easy chair and the operator will come to her to work the magic transformation.

First, there's an application of cleansing cream, then a good massage with skin food and pore cream. A revivifying astringent is patted on, followed by a foundation cream, and a regular make-up including rouge, powder, lipstick, eye shadow, and mascaroon.

The results speak for themselves! When hubby comes in he'll feel fat and 40 with a wife who looks like daughter.

A black net cape collar treated with an inch-wide band of sequins around the neck, and vertical stripes of them running cartwheel fashion should by all rights make the wearer feel like a queen of Paris. Her mirror will reflect a vision of black and silver artistry and the lookers' eyes will shine with appreciation for what is surely one of the season's most outstanding creations.

A downtown department store has a gift section where the counters are loaded with frivolous novelties. But tucked away there on one side is an extremely practical something looking somewhat lost among so many giddy gift suggestions. It's a fountain pen set! A black heavy glass base with a pen holder is the first part which catches the eye. Alongside is a tall fountain pen of tortoise shell composition. One ordinarily pays just so much for a pen holder, and that much more for a pen. But in this instance, the set complete has a bargain price.

The black base is lovely enough within, but a chrome monogram gives it that air of distinction which all of us like in anything. This lettering is done in the store for a small extra fee.

As sport gloves, fabrics have had phenomenal success this season, and now as dress gloves they're coming into their own too. An F street shop boasts some with wide full sateen cuffs contrasting with a thin cotton hand. These come in black and white and brown and white in all sizes.

Men in general and maiden aunts in particular are the hardest people in the world to shop for. Here's Christmas almost upon us and still we don't know what they'd like. The shop windows and display counters barrage us with suggestions, but none of them seem to suit. A shopper, though, who winds her way up and down the aisles day after day might offer a suggestion that's as likely as anything, and likelier than some to please. It's a leather portfolio containing stationary, blotter, address and stamp notebook, and a pen and pencil set. Available in three shades, brown, maroon, and blue.

Equal Nationality Treaty Hailed as Women's Victory

Montevideo Agreement Placing Women on Equal Footing in Western Hemisphere Is Seen as Ushering in a World-Wide Reform.

The action of the conference of American Republics at Montevideo in adopting a treaty guaranteeing equal nationality rights for men and women throughout the Western Hemisphere was hailed yesterday as the greatest single forward step in all history.

Cables of congratulation from every part of the country were received at headquarters of the Inter-American Commission of Women in Washington, which had labored for the adoption of the treaty. Mrs. S. O. Levinson, of Chicago, international jurist, in a telegram to Alice Paul, chairman of the Nationality Committee of the Inter-American Commission of Women, said:

"Unstinted congratulations on women's emancipation proclamation at Montevideo. The granting of equal nationality rights to women is a belated act of simple justice. It will be a tremendous aid to world peace to which women have contributed so much since acquiring the suffrage in our own and other countries.

"I shall be disappointed and chagrined if the United States should reverse its position for equality in Nationality rights which was taken internationally by the last Administration on three different occassions. I sincerely hope that the United States will sign the progressive and epoch making treaty adopted by the conference of American States at Montevideo, which, when ratified, will establish equality in nationality throughout the Western Hemisphere."

Another message of congratulation was from Dr. James Brown Scott, president of the American Society of International Law. Dr. Scott said:

"Warmest congratulations on the stupendous victory at Montevideo. The action by the Pan-American conference in voting for a treaty guaranteeing equality in nationality, means that a new chapter has begun in the world's history. It means the beginning of an era in which the international community will be based upon equality between men and women instead of, as at present, upon the subordination of women. I sincerely hope that the United States delegation will sign the equal nationality Treaty."

Another message was from the Women's Consultative committee on Nationality created by the council of League of Nations, with headquarters at Geneva. This message slad:

"The women of Europe and Asia rejoice in the great forward step for equality in nationality taken by the American Republics at Montevideo. For three years we have been urging the Equal Nationality Treaty upon the assemblies of the League of Nations and each year we have been rebuffed. The new world has now taken the leadership on the question of the freedom of women and has set an example for the League of Nations which we hope the League will soon follow. Please accept our heartiest congratulations and our deep admiration for your gallant campaign. Women the world over will benefit by the fight that you have made and the victory that you have won."

Mrs. Roosevelt Frowns Down Warlike Toys

Suggests Instead Toys of Foresters and Farmers.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been doing her Christmas shopping, including several visits to the toy counters. There she was struck with the emphasis placed upon warlike toys,—tin soldiers, cannons, tanks, battleships, and so on. Such toys, she fears, have a tendency to teach children to be little militarists.

So today she issued an appeal to toy manufacturers to abandon these lines, and to make instead "armies of foresters and farmers, and mills with model workmen." Her appeal, made public in her monthly department in the Woman's Home Companion, says:

"I believe that we not only can encourage ingenuity and build up imagination in children by the types of toys and games and books that we provide them with, but I believe that we can also give them tastes and interests which will be helpful to them later on.

"I should like to see the Nations of the world gradually do away with weapons of war. I know this must be done simultaneously and therefore, I should like to begin with the children of today and teach them to do without toys which tend to make them think of war as a game.

"I do not believe that every little boy, who plays with soldiers and stages his battles and shoots the opposition army down with peas is going to be an ardent militarist. But I do believe that the glamour of the gorgeously dressed toy soldiers and the variegated toy armies with different uniforms and cavalry and artillery and bands will somehow create in the boy's mind an excitment which will carry over into manhood and may lead him, when he hears the military band play and sees uniforms and hears the ryhthmic tramp of marching feet through the streets, to desire to join them.

"New attitudes of mind come gradually and why should we not suggest to toy makers the world over that they have a responsibility to future civilization; and that they might just as well make armies of young foresters and farmers, and model mines, and mills with model workmen, and model houses and model machinery?"

White House Christmas Recipe.

(Associated Press.)

Christmas is just a week off, so it's time to plan the dinner.

If you wish a Rooseveltian recipe to give it flavor, here's one straight from the White House—for chestnut dressing: 3 pounds peeled chestnuts, 1 quart stale bread crumbs, ¾ cup butter, 1 lemon, juice and grated rind, salt, pepper, parsley, nutmeg. Boil nuts in salted water, mash. Fry bread crumbs in the butter which has first been slightly browned with the black pepper until nicely blended. Mix with nuts, add seasoning and enough stock until it is of the consistency wanted.

"Jove!—Those Americans Are Alarm Clocks!" Britisher Finds

Poor Sir Percival Phillips Is Out of Breath Trying to Keep Up With Our Mad Race After No Good End.

London, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Sir Percival Phillips, one of England's most noted journalist-observers on the world front, has returned from a survey of America's new deal that left him breathless with amazement at the development of "speed—speed—speed" in the "new" United States.

Under the heading, "Where the Clock Hands Behave Like Propellers," his latest article published in the Daily Mail is a mixture of pleased astonishment and vague uneasiness over the effect of the mechanical and physical speeding up of today's generation of Americans.

"Life within these frontiers," he said, appears to an Englishman accustomed to the easy pace of Europe, "to be a mad race around an alarm clock, with no fixed goal in sight but the grave."

Sir Percival was impressed by daily "service which compels admiration"—the one-day laundry service; the rapidity of luggage transfer from one city to another; the servicing of telegraph and telephone messages; the lack of delay in cashing checks. But he views with shudders and alarm the state of the American stomach.

"Meals are bolted," he wrote, "in a way that shows no mercy for the delicate machinery dedicated to food. The intent occupants of public restaurants rush in to refuel; they never really lunch or dine. They can be seen bowed over the latest time-saving invention, a form of circular china trough divided into compartments, which bring the main ingredients of the midday ration simultaneously within range. This is called the 'club plate' luncheon, with which to flog the laggard through his hasty meal."

Pastel Shades Lose to Vivid Evening Hues

Orange, Red and Gold Are Among Tones Favored for Exotic New Gowns.

Silver, gold, and tawny shades of red, yellow, and orange, are being used for bewitching evening gowns that are stealing the spotlight from black, white, and pastel hues.

Burnt orange chiffon gown and deep brown velvet trailing evening coat comprise another interesting combination. Sable trims the coat at the shoulder line. Luxurious sable also lends an extravagant touch to a gold lame cloak that is fitted tightly to the waist and then flares to the floor. Long, flowing sleeves are banded with the fur. Gold-toned chiffon lines the gorgeous cloak.

Yellow, in a smoky saffron shade, creates a gown that is an answer to a debutante's prayer. It is made of a heavy crepe and moulds the figure lovingly from shoulders to knees then spreads in a full flair at the floor-length hem. Five rows of padded satin tubing in a lighter shade outline the drop-shoulder decolletage and the bottom of the gown. Below the drop shoulder line the back is cut to the waist in a wide U.

The Farm Drudge Is Becoming A Fun-Lover, Says Miss Ward

By Frances Mangum.

Gone is the farmer's wife of yesteryear!

The country woman who spent hours churning butter, and baking bread, who wore homespuns, and drove into town behind Dobbin on rare occasions has been replaced. Her counterpart is a modern woman who arrays herself in a Paris model, steps into the auto and whips into town at 50 miles an hour to buy her butter and bread.

Down at the Department of Agriculture yesterday Miss Florence Ward stated decidedly that the "typical" farmer's wife is a legend now. And Miss Ward ought to know. She is in charge of the extension work for the Eastern States and makes it her business to meet farm families and advise them as to the most up-to-date methods of running the rural home.

"Because of the drudgery attached to the old-time farm, the housewife was a slave to her chores. She had family, her household interests, but she missed the lighter diversions which keep a woman young.

"Nowadays, thank goodness, it's different. Very different! Instead of bending over an awkward old wood range half the day she cooks by gas or electricity and takes no longer preparing a meal than the average city woman.

"Instead of the figurative four bare walls and a roof above, she has an attractive home, one of which any woman could be proud.

"All this didn't come about in a day, of course. It took time and a lot of effort on the part of the Government to really modernize the farm wife."

"This was the first legislation to recognize the farm home as a factor in economic advance of American agriculture. It provided funds for a service which facilitates the farm woman's work, adds to her leisure, inspires self-expression and neighborhood teamwork.

"By means of the funds granted in this act we have been able to found recreation camps for farm women. Their success has been a most miraculous thing!

"Women who have never been away from home since they were married take a three-day holiday at one of these camps. In that brief time they learn new rules for living!"

Miss Ward explained that it is not easy to persuade farm women to leave their homes even for a short time for anything sounding so frivolous as a "recreation camp." The home demonstration agent maintained by the government in the State Agricultural Colleges and in many communities makes the rounds of her section and explains the real value of the camps. She points out to the farm wife that she will become a more valuable person in the family by getting away and brushing up with other women and taking the courses of instruction which the camp offers.

"These camps," Miss Ward continued, "teach women, who in some cases have long since forgotten how to laugh and play, what a long way a little merriment can go toward making life interesting.

"There are paid teachers, too, who give instruction in home economics. They teach new ideas of comfort and beauty in the home—point out some simple rules of color and design as applied to the living room, the care of little children; the health aspect of food, clothing, and sanitation as a means of building strong bodies.

"Besides instructors of serious things, there are gym teachers who put the vacationists through some pretty stiff setting-up exercises in the morning, and singing teachers who often develop real camp choruses.

"There are always swimming facilities close at hand, and my, how some of these campers take to the water—like the ducks in their own back yard!" she added with a chuckle.

Miss Ward picked up a book of statistics lying on her desk and turned the pages. "There are 682 farm women's camps throughout the country," she said. "And would you believe it, there are 74,855 women attending them!

"No other nation on earth has such a fine body of women citizens in the open country as has America. Surely no home-maker has such opportunity to contribute her full share to the life of her home, community, State and Nation as has the woman on the land.

"Given a reasonable freedom from financial anxiety and social isolation, backed by the home economics forces of her State College and the Department of Agriculture, she is not only keeping up the best traditions of our farm home of the past, but is striving to raise its efficiency and culture to the high standards of today.

"Considering the fine qualities of this large home-loving group, we can scarcely gauge the importance to the larger civic housekeeping of such influences as women's camps and social developments of country life. These are capitalizing the dynamic force and leadership of this producer of wealth and nurturer of human life—the American Farm Woman!"

Holiday Cheer Descends On The Capital

Plans to Aid Santa Claus Fill White House and Officials' Homes.

The Christmas scattering has started, the Christmas shopping seethes, and Christmas plans fill White House, homes of the Cabinet, odd moments of all officialdom.

Representative Isabella Greenway and her son, Jack, are off to Arizona, according to the Associated Press; Alice Roosevelt Longworth to Daughter Paulina and to Cincinnati; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers to Lowell, Mass. The scattering is wide, but not so numerous as in the days when Congress opened in December.

Among Capital shoppers, faces familiar in legislalve halls smile out: Senator Hattie Caraway getting ready for Christmas Day with two of her sons, Paul and Forrest; Representative Florence P. Kahn, off briefly from long hours on Appropriations Committee deliberations that precede the session, buying little autos, airplanes and fire engines for her 2-year-old grandson, Julius 3d, away out in California.

For the White House itself, trees and wreaths and greens and poinsettias have been selected, and will be moved in next week—the background for a Roosevelt family celebration to include four generations, with a children's party the day after Christmas and a joyous young people's dance December 30.

'Roosevelt's Great!' Says His Sculptor

Man Who Modeled President in Clay Amazed at Real Man.

Jo Davidson, who spent three days in the White House last week modeling President Roosevelt in clay, said yesterday he found the President somewhat disturbing because he had no eccentricities.

Every other contemporary personality he has modeled, from George Bernard Shaw to the Mahatma Gandhi, the sculptor told the Associated Press, has had some phobia, some inculcated subconscious oddity, some attribute that made for eccentricity.

But Mr. Roosevelt, he said, is a man devoid of inhibitions and complexes and is possessed of a sense of humor.

"He is truly a great man," said Davidson. "Consider what he has done for American art, just for instance. I am not trying to make a point, but the Public Works art project, or whatever it is called, swims like a minnow to the top of my mind. It is significant, great, or, of you wish to be cynical, passing fair."

Like to Like.

Tommy Peeks, Finds Spirit of Christmas

Mother Fails to Scold Son Who Discovers Gifts.

Tommy had broken trust and peeked at the Christmas presents. For days his mother had been puting mysterious parcels away in the spare bedroom, and Tommy knew it. He had been told to keep out of the room, and had obeyed just as long as he felt able to. Then the temptation to know whether his wishes had been fulfilled grew too great, and he slipped into the room and looked.

Somehow things were not quite so nice after he had looked, though what he had seen was more than satisfactory. For some days his spirit felt sick and droopy, and finally he confessed his secret to his mother. He expected a scolding, and felt that he deserved it.

But to his surprise he got none. His mother was disappointed at his disobedience but she understood just how impossible it had been to restrain his curiosity, and sent him back to his play at peace with himself and the world.

It was Tommy's first lesson in the Christmas spirit of good will. Had his mother scolded him or punished him, the season would have been shadowed by his disgrace. Some of the joy of it would have been gone forever.

And yet it would have seemed quite reasonable and not at all surprising if his mother had expressed keen annoyance. Some of the fun was gone from her own Christmas.

Maybe in time Tommy learned the lesson too, for children have an uncanny way of sensing atmosphere.

Washington's Junior Leaguers Lend a Hand

A patrician young woman, clad in a smart street costume, looked up with interest at the begrimed man in overalls standing near her in a poorly furnished room.

"Just two more years as fireman and I'd have been an engineer on one of the fast trains. It sure is tough, lady."

The lady agreed with him. It was tough. The man had been out of work for months. His wife and youngest child were ill in the next room. Two undernourished little girls tugged at the pretty society woman's knee and, as she listened to their father's story, she patted them affectionately.

The young woman on the errand of mercy was Mrs. Wilfred Lacy Goodwyn, jr., attractive member of the Junior League of Washington. Instead of living in a whirl of social gayeties she spends several days each week doing active social work. This last year she has served as chairman of the Junior League committee that assists the Associated Charities. The 12 society girls under her direction go into homes where difficulties exist, caused by behavior, illness, or poverty. They also make friendly calls upon members of the "white collar" class who need cheer, courage, and companionship.

"The work interests me immensely because I've always liked people," said the slender, blue-eyed, brown-haired Mrs. Goodwyn yesterday morning at the Junior League headquarters. She was busily checking over her file to see what Junior Leaguers were to visit unhappy homes that day.

Harris & Ewing.

Society girls do not spend all their time flitting from dinners to balls. One of them, Mrs. Wilfred Lacy Goodwyn, jr., prominent member of the Junior League, devotes several days each week to social service. She has several very young admirers at the Associated Charities, including the little chap with the serious look on his face.

Mrs. Wilfred L. Goodwin, Jr., Directs 12 Society Girls in One of Groups.

"Of course every member of the league is required to give so many hours each day to welfare work or to the arts. Most of us choose welfare work. Before I joined the league in 1931 I had done some social service in Richmond. It was interesting, but I like it even better now that I am working with girls of my own crowd who are members of the league. We take it quite seriously, too. You'd be surprised how we talk about our work when we meet at bridge parties and dinners. And do you know, a lot of the people we meet on our welfare calls are really very fine. They're just men and women who have had bad luck."

Mrs. Goodwyn, before her marriage about two years ago, was Elizabeth Lee Valentine, of Richmond, of the illustrious Valentine family that has played an important part in cultural affairs of the State of Virginia. Her great-uncle, Edward Valentine, was a famous sculptor and made the recumbent statue of Robert E. Lee in the Lee Memorial Chapel at Lexington, Va. Her grandfather bequeathed his home to the city of Richmond for a museum. Her father, Granville Gray Valentine, is now carrying on the work of the museum.

Loew's to Observe Thirtieth Anniversary in January—Mr. Harris Explains All

Loew Founded First Theater In January '04

Observing an anniversary that marks practically the complete span of life of the cinema as an appreciable factor in mass entertainment, the Loew theaters throughout the United States during the month of January will celebrate 30 years of active purveyance of motion pictures.

Since the year 1904, when Marcus Loew established his first little nickelodeon, Loew's, Inc., has see its chain of theaters grow from ocean to ocean, with palatial houses in all of the principal cities of the land and the product of its producing branch, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, regularly presented in a globe-circling "circuit" of theaters penetrating to all centers of population in the world.

The January celebration of Loew's thirtieth anniversary will take the form of the uninterrupted presentation of a special roster of attractions to be shown in all Loew theaters throughout the United States. In Washington this stress will be laid upon superlative entertainment in all three of the Loew theaters—Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia.

Many Features Available.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will not be relied upon alone to supply the necessary number of screen features, but considerable reliance will be placed in the best of the output of the United Artists' studios for the first month of the new year.

Included in the list of attractions that will be available for this concerted drive for "bigger and better" pictures and audiences will be Eddie Cantor in "Roman Scandals;" Ramon Navarro and Jeanette MacDonald in "The Cat and the Fiddle," Robert Montgomery in "Free, White and Desperate," Greta Garbo and John Gilbert in "Queen Christina," Lionel Barrymore, Marie Dressler, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery, John Barrymore and all-star support in "Dinner at Eight," to be released as a regular program offering; "Eskimo," with a native cast, "Viva Villa," the subject to which the Lee Tracy escapade in Mexico has brought such sudden notoriety; "Hollywood Party," "Tarzan and His Mate," with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan, Ben Lyon and Otto Kruger in "The Comeback," Richard Dix and Madge Evans in "The Day of Reckoning" and one or two more now in the cutting room.

Also "Shorts."

Short supplementary subjects of comparable interest and worth are said to be available to augment these major features. In fact, it is the confident expectation of City Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's in Washington, that the January birthday observance will be recognized as one of the greatest periods of Grade A entertainment in the history of the theater in Washington.

Mr. Frank La Falce, of the Warner Brothers organization in the National Capital, turns back the years by leaving a copy of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," "Through the Looking Glass" and "The Hunting of the Snark" on the dramatic desk as a harbinger of the coming Christmas week to the Metropolitan of Paramount's production of "Alice in Wonderland," with Charlotte Henry, a recent Washington visitor, in the title role. The compact and attractive little volume, with reproductions of the original illustrations by Sir John Tenniel, bears a foreword by Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, who, of course, is the First Lady of the Land, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Many thanks for the refreshment of memory in such handsome form.

First of the Revels.

RKO-Keith's Theater is the first to bob up betimes with a detailed announcement of plans for a gala New Year's Eve performance to occupy the midnight hour.

Emphasis is laid particularly upon the fact that no attempt is to be made to make this a reserved seat affair. The idea is that on New Year's Eve merrymakers may start their celebration at RKO-Keith's at any hour they desire during the evening and continue as long as they wish. Tickets will be on sale at the box office and seat locations will be available purely on the basis of first come, first served.

The major screen attraction for this midnight pastiming will be RKO-Radio's pretentious production of "Flying Down to Rio," the spectacular musical subject in which Dolores Del Rio, Fred Astaire and others of note are to be seen in the principal roles. The score for the picture was composed by no less distinguished a writer of popular melodies than Vincent Youmans, a gifted young man with many successful musical comedies and operettas already to his credit.

French Porkers.

The added attraction will be the French version of Walt Disney's Technicolor classic, "Three Little Pigs," the most popular and most widely acclaimed "Silly Symphony" in the entire history of that delightful series of whimsical short-reel releases.

This New Year's Eve midnight performance, by the way, will inaugurate the regular engagement of "Flying Down to Rio," which will be the featured attraction at RKO-Keith's throughout the ensuing New Year's week and as long thereafter as its box-office tabulations seem to warrant.

Speaking of Christmas, as everybody will be from now on, even if we have not been continuously heretofore, seasonable decorations are beginning to make their appearance in all of the theater lobbies and about the stage prosceniums.

Returns to Stage at National

Frances Starr, in private life Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, of Washington, who last evening came out of retirement to lend her brilliant talents to "The Lake," Jed Harris' distinguished production, presented in the National Theater for the first time on any stage last night, with Katharine Hepburn as its star, and Blanche Bates, another former Belasco star, prominently cast.

Loew's Fox is one of the first of the downtown, first-run houses to get its Yuletide "atmosphere" in first-rate working order. All of the orchestras—what few are left—also are tuning up to rehearse "Holy Night," the favorite hymn that will be heard without cessation from now on.

"Saturday's Children."

Something less than a perfect liaison between the front and back rooms of the Jed Harris executive offices in New York, it seems, was the cause of the Union Station contretemps of last Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Harris and his star, Miss Katharine Hepburn, debouched from the ostensibly "blind" side of a Pullman and, in a manner of speaking, took it on the lam across the railroad tracks to the City Post Office, where a friendly mail clerk concealed them in momentarily unemployed mail pouches until fall of darkness, when they could steal cautiously down a dark ramp into the silent streets and dingy alleys back of the Government Printing Office and thence, by foot, pack train and canoe make their way westward to their hotel.

Mr. Arthur J. Levy, avant courier for "The Lake," one is led to believe, said something about an interview or two and maybe some photographers at the station, when Mr. Harris and Miss Hepburn left New York, of a Saturday noon, or thereabouts, but these vague admonitions Mr. Harris construed to mean the station in New York, where there were also interviewers and photographers, just as there were here.

Chivalry to the Fore.

Having been unadvised of any prearranged reception in Washington, Mr. Harris, gazing out of his Pullman window, had but one thought when he perceived what he took to be a howling mob of autograph hunters clustered on the platform eagerly waiting to pounce upon his star and tear her limb from limb. His protective and chivalrous instinct naturally asserted itself and he set about at once in his fertile brain devising ways and means to defeat the dire purposes of the album and pencil squad. The side door exit and precipitate flight across the ties seemed the only way.

When engaged in a pleasant and wholly friendly conversation of some half or three-quarters of an hour in Mr. Stephen E. Cochran's office in the National yesterday afternoon, Mr. Harris was desolate that he should have given the impression that either he or Miss Hepburn had intentionally slighted either Mr. Cochran or the local press by their failure to recognize the outward symbols of hastily made plans of which he had never heard.

The blame, he said, was entirely his. Miss Hepburn had been rehearsing day and night, with further ordeals immediately before her, and it was only to shield her from the strain of combating a large and too-enthusiastic crowd that he had perpetrated his inpromptu hoax.

Hatchet Is Buried.

Neither he nor Miss Hepburn were aware of the presence of the press or the photographers and neither had ever before seen Mr. Cochran, in charge of the intended festivities, so could not possibly have recognized him.

It was all the result of a complete misapprehension on the part of both sides and so the matter rests—the press feels no further ire as a result of a slight it was not offered, and Miss Hepburn is absolved from all charges of conscious rudeness, which, of course, coincides much more fully with what one naturally has always attributed to a young woman of breeding, education and sterling attainment.

In short, the whole sorry circumstance is forgotten by both sides.

It was just one of those things.

Incidentally, in referring to Miss Hepburn's local appearance in her brief assignment to the role of Princess Grazia in "Death Takes a Holiday," in this department's Sabbath observations, reference was inadvertently made to the National Theater as the playhouse in which that unusual play had been presented. "Death Takes a Holiday," in which Miss Hepburn appeared for two nights, was, of course, presented in the Shubert-Belasco Theater.

And so away, stiffly starched and highly perfumed, to jump into "The Lake!"

CWA Survey Projects Start

37 More Are Scheduled; 400 Men Will Get Employment.

Several local control surveys under the direction of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey were placed in the field yesterday in Maryland.

Prof. S. S. Steinberg, head of the department of civil engineering of the University of Maryland, in administrative charge of the State survey, stated new parties will be organized as rapidly as possible until Maryland's quota of 40 has been attained.

The surveys are financed by the Civil Works Administration. Each party contains ten men, of which five are experienced in engineering work and the remainder unskilled labor. It is planned, as far as possible, to use men in the areas where they live.

In addition to providing employment, the work will supplement the horizontal and vertical surveys already established in Maryland by the Coast and Geodetic Survey for highway construction, flood control of rivers, city planning, topographic mapping and land surveying.

One party in Prince Georges County and one in Montgomery County were started yesterday, with the others in the Baltimore area. Another will be organized in Southern Maryland tomorrow. Seventeen parties have been sent out to date. Ten are in the vicinity of Baltimore, two in Anne Arundel County, one on the Eastern Shore, one in Washington County and one in Allegany County.

The Prince Georges County survey will be made in the College Park area, and that in Montgomery in the vicinity of Sandy Spring.

The University of Maryland and Johns Hopkins University have donated offices and engineering instruments for the work. State and city engineering departments, corporations, engineers and surveyors have loaned equipment, autos and trucks.

Three Are Jailed Here On White Slave Charge

The three are Mike Borrelli, Louis Rolando and Arthur Biazzi. Each faces a maximum sentence of two years for bringing three young girls to Washington from Pennsylvania.

By Nelson B. Bell.

A thoughtful and a moving play, a cast that linked a gracious and a mellow past with a rich and vibrant present and the most distinguished audience of the season last evening in the National Theater conspired to create an occasion of sentimental warmth such as the playhouse witnesses no more than once in a generation.

It was an event of unusual luster, marked by the perfect harmony of a cast and audience so completely and obviously en rapport as to stand unique among recent premieres, this first performance on any stage of "The Lake," a play which brings Miss Katharine Hepburn back to the living theater from the shadowy precincts of the cinema, flanked by two such admirable artistes as Miss Frances Starr and Miss Blanche Bates, and which, furthermore, seems destined to bestow new prestige upon the house of the youthful Mr. Jed Harris as a young man of extraordinary prescience in the theater.

"The Lake" is a drama of youth's struggle against environment and rebellion against the tyranny of trivialities; the story of an independent, if somewhat baffled, young girl's groping after the verities of life, her quest of a true and enduring love and her final anxiety to apprehend the sweet uses of adversity.

Diverse Content.

It is a play in which are blended the first-act drawing-room graces of an Alfred Sutro, an Arthur Wing Pinero or a Clyde Fitch, the second-act satire of a Noel Coward and the bitter third-act realities of an Ibsen or an O'Neill.

The movement of the three acts at times is slow and the purposes of Dorothy Massingham and Murray MacDonald, the authors, are not always free from the reluctant charge of being abstruse, but when the searching human analysis of the three acts is summed up in Stella Surrege's heroic joust with death, disillusionment and despair, it is a clearcut, fine and memorable image that is left deeply imprinted upon the consciousness of the attentive spectator.

The petty peccadilloes of the casual flirtation, the shallow exaggeration of life's nonessentials by a self-centered and platitudinous mother and the superficial devotion of social adventurers and moral cowards are made to seem very small, very inconsequential and very ludicrous indeed.

There is little action in any but the first scene of the second act, an hilariously amusing travesty of what happens when a wedding reception is held under a leaky canopy in a garden on a rainy day. It is here, by the author's adroit sense of contrast, that Stella comes into her perfect love, only to have it blasted within the hour by the death of her bridegroom in an automobile accident caused by her mother's silly whim to convert a lovely woodland into a muddy and treacherous lake. The effect of the argumentative passages of the play, of course, depends almost wholly upon the skill with which they are rendered. "The Lake" in this regard is uncommonly fortunate.

Miss Hepburn Scores.

Katharine Hepburn, in the role of Stella, which no more than shares honors evenly with those of Mrs. Surrege and her maiden sister-in-law, Lena Surrege, played by Miss Starr and Miss Bates, respectively, brings to the stage the same indefinable charm that has characterized her work in the four pictures in which she has appeared on the screen. The screen, as a matter of fact, loses much that the stage gains in the blondeness, the ingenuousness and the utter youthfulness of this fragile, poised and romantic young actress.

There were moments last evening, perhaps, when Miss Hepburn seemed a trifle too staccato for best effect, and, now and again, her timing of speeches lacked something of perfect rhythm, but there was never an instant when she failed to command attention, hold the audience's undivided interest and win its unstinted acclaim.

The reappearance of Miss Starr and Miss Bates on the same stage was the signal for no less than an ovation for each—a tribute to fragrant memories of their many notable achievements under the proudly floating banner of the late David Belasco that was amply repaid by performances that stand among the most valuable items "The Lake" can boast. Miss Starr is cast as the irritatingly self-satisfied mother and Miss Bates as the blunt, sane and delightfully humorous Lena. Both play their parts with the deftness, the surety and the finesse of distinguished and brilliant veterans of the theater's heyday.

Excellent Support.

Colin Clive, in the tragic role of the ardent lover whose dream of happiness is abruptly snapped off by the skidding of an auto wheel has less to do than the feminine members of the cast, but executes such tasks as fall to his lot with earnestness and warmth. Lionel Pape, as the ignominiously dominated Henry Surrege, is an effective composite of Charles Dana Gibson's "Mr. Pipp" and H. T. Webster's "Caspar Milquetoast," given an English accent. It is an eloquent bit of miming he contributes to the play, as may be said also of Geoffrey Wardwell, as a hapless philanderer; Roberta Beatty, his wife; Constance Pelissier, Reginald Carrington and the numerous others comprising the supporting ensemble.

Jo Mielziner has equipped the play with settings that aid appreciably in making "The Lake" one of the more noteworthy additions to the season's meager list of adult and literate dramas. Mr. Harris' sound direction adds further to this splendid effect.

Struck by a truck as he crossed the street near his home, Allan Burke, 5, of 208 E street northwest, was injured critically last night.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital where physicians said he suffered possible internal injuries and concussion of the brain. Police said Howard L. Patten, 27, of 3414 Eighth street northeast, was driving the truck.

Back-to-Farm Move Creates New Problems

(United Press.)

The back-to-the-farm movement resulting from unemployment in cities has raised new problems in training individuals to make their own living from the soil, Secretary of Interior Ickes' annual report pointed out yesterday.

Ickes transmitted to President Roosevelt reports of the multitudinous bureaus under his jurisdiction, including that of the Federal Board of Vocational Education, which noted that "for several years the net drift has been away from the city."

Shift to Suburban Area.

Much of this shift in population represents a back to the farm movement of unemployed families, the board said, and "it has embraced also in increasing volume a drift out of congested urban areas into nearby suburban districts, where the worker could secure a piece of ground for farming on a small scale."

Citing the Government's effort to establish jobless West Virginia miners on homsteads, the board Pointed out:

"This means they must be taught how to farm for home consumption. But more than this, since it is a 'farm-factory' rather than simply a farm project, they must be taught also to engage in some subsidiary craft or trade."

NRA code provisions banning employment of children up to 16 years also have increased necessity of providing more vocational education facilities, it was said.

Other Topics Discussed.

The Geological Survey, Federal reclamation, National parks and Indian affairs were among topics discussed in the report which showed Interior Department bureaus have operated with greatly reduced budgets.

The Public Works Administration, headed by Ickes, was not disqussed. No mention was made of activities under the petroleum and oil codes, of which the Secretary is administrator. It was pointed out that all these additional activities were brought under his jurisdiction of the department subsequent to June 30, the end of the fiscal year covered in the report.

Business Codes Are Ruled Out For Filipinos

But Cummings Declares Their U. S. Exports Can Be Curtailed.

Attorney General Cummings yesterday ruled the recovery act shall not apply to the Philippines, in so far as the law prescribes formulation and enforcement of industrial codes.

At the same time, he ruled imports from the islands will be subject to curtailment or embargo under section 3 (e) of the act which enables the President to regulate the influx of foreign goods which "render ineffective or seriously endanger the maintenance of any code or agreement."

An investigation under that section was ordered yesterday by President Roosevelt with the view to limiting importations of cotton rugs from Japan, France, Belgium and Italy if it is found American manufacturers' complaints that they cannot compete with these foreign wares.

The opinion was in reply to a request made November 20 by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson as the result of protests by proponents of a cordage and twine code that they could not establish proper labor conditions and meet Philippine competition.

Auto Industry Code Extended

Roosevelt Prolongs It to Sept. 4, 1934, on Report 25,100 Got Jobs.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt yesterday extended the effective date of the automobile manufacturers' code through September 4, 1934, upon the report of Hugh S. Johnson, the Recovery Administrator, that employment had increased 20 per cent and pay rolls 16 per cent under the agreement.

The extension was requested by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. The request was forwarded by Johnson to the White House with a report that since September 5, when the code went into effect, millions of dollars have been added in wages and thousands of idle workers given jobs.

Johnson's report said the increase in pay rolls was from $12,700,000 in July, to $14,700,000 in September for firms represented in the chamber, composing 78 per cent of the production capacity of the industry.

Employment, he said, increased from 125,600 in July to 150,700 in September.

2-Cent Milk Cut Is Urged For District

National Dairy Head Denies Trust; Probe Is Finished.

A reduction of 2 cents per quart the retail price of milk was ged by Mrs. John Boyle, chairan of the District Consumer's ouncil, before the Senate Milk vestigating Committee, which last ght concluded its inquiry into strict milk prices.

Senator William H. King, chairan of the committee, announced e findings of the committee will made public before the first of e year, and directed Elwood H. al, special counsel to the committe, to prepare a list of recomendations for the committee rt.

Claiming that her organization presented 150,000 consumers of e city, Mrs. Boyle read a statent which purported to show that onomies practiced by the National iry Products Corporation, which stributes 60 per cent of the Capil's milk supply, had not been ssed on to the consumer.

Favors Monopoly.

"Personally," Mrs. Boyle said, "I vor a monopoly in milk distribuon, because it would enable a ximum amount of economy, but, course, the only reason for such onomies is that of public interest, hich, in this case, can be proted only by a reduction in prices the consumer."

Henry N. Woolman, a director of e National Dairy Products Corration, told the committee he had quently consulted Dr. Clyde L. ng, former milk adviser to the gricultural Adjustment Administration, while milk marketing pacts re being considered for the iar milksheds.

Under cross-examination by Mr. al, Dr. Woolman admitted he had ed the services of a stenographer Dr. King's office and that he had d the A. A. A. telephones for g-distance calls, but he emphaed that all charges on the calls d been reversed.

McInnerney Denies "Trust."

Thomas H. McInnerney, president the National Dairy Products Corration, denied his corporation is "milk trust." He testified his comny handled only 8 per cent of total milk production of the untry and the average net profits the company were about 6 per nt.

Questioned by Mr. Seal with reect to economies effected by acisitions of subsidiaries, Mr. McInrney replied there had been reting economies in distribution, vertising, delivery and the purase of bottles.

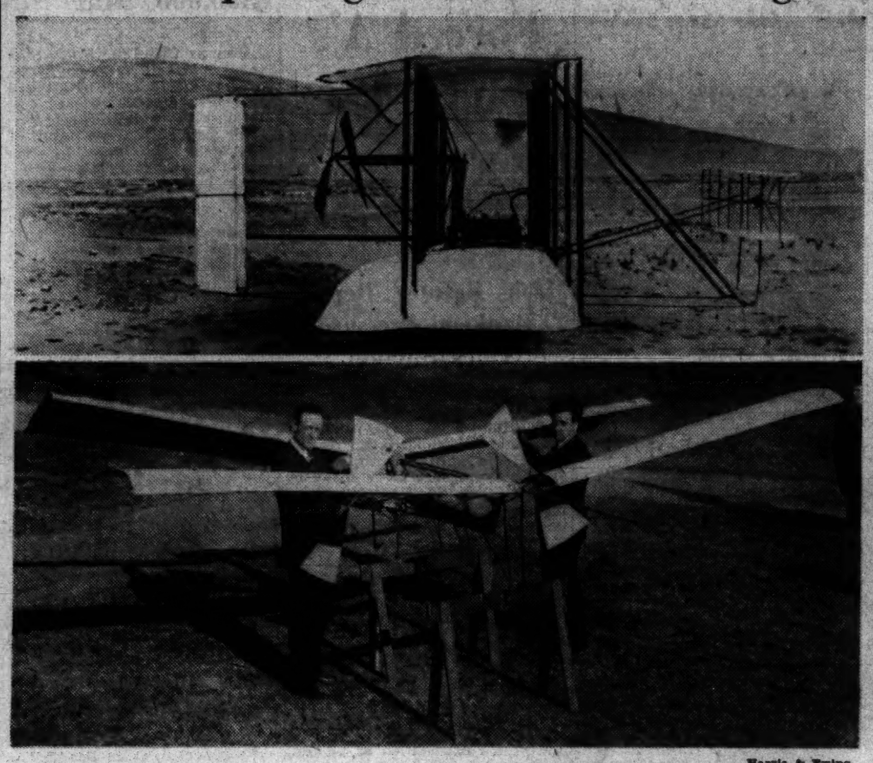
Subsidiaries of the National Dairy losing money in Detroit, Omaha, d Kansas City, Mr. McInnerney d, and these losses are being istered by the profits from other mpanies. Since the purchase of Chestnut Farms Dairy, he said, profits have increased.

"Nothing to Conceal."

The company, Mr. McInnerney d, has nothing to conceal in the rchases or operations of affiliates. ey were bought on a basis of a r price in a competitive market. added, and they were not purased for the purpose of, nor did y result in, the raising of prices the consumer nor the lowering them to the producer.

National Dairy Products Corporon is publicly owned by 68,000 ckholders living in every State the Union," he added. "The mpany employs 32,800 people. It rchases the products of 250,000 rmers and pays cash promptly for se products."

Museum Again Asks Wright to Forget Error And Help Bring Plane Back From England



Harris & Ewing.

Two early airplanes, center of discussion as to which was the first to fly. Upper, the original Wright plane photographed near Kitty Hawk, N. C., where the Wright brothers first flew in 1903. Below, a model of the Langley plane, now in the Smithsonian, also credited with the first flight.

Best Position Is Promised If Air Pioneer Will Forgive "Affront."

The Smithsonian Institution again has asked Orville Wright to forget its old mistake in an effort to return the original Wright airplane from England, it was learned yesterday.

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the institution, has asked the inventor to forget the "affront" that caused him to send the machine to the British National Museum.

The most prominent place in the aeronautical collection was promised for the machine by Dr. Abbot, who also offered to submit to Mr. Wright for approval the label which would appear on the plane.

Langley First Got Credit.

The original controversy between Wright and the institution arose when George Maynard, former curator of technological collections, labeled the Langley Airdrome of 1903 as the "first machine capable of flight carrying a man."

Wright took this as an intentional affront which recognized Samuel P. Langley, then secretary of the institution, as the airplane inventor. Later the Smithsonian Institution admitted that the label was wrong and it was removed.

Dr. Abbot suggested a committee of three, one member named by Wright, another by the institution and a third by these two, to iron out the difficulties. He said that if Wright agreed the institution would ask Lindbergh to serve, if Wright did not.

Mistake Explained in 1928.

In 1928, Dr. Abbot published a pamphlet outlining the cause of the breach and at that time requested Mr. Wright to accept the apology. Wright did not reply.

At Dayton, Ohio, according to the Associated Press, Wright was asked to comment on the offer by Dr. Abbot. He said he had not received it and would have nothing to say until officially informed.

He said he had confidence in Col. Lindbergh when asked how he would view negotiations with the institution through him.

D. C. Citizens Demand Voice In NRA Rule

Consumers Ignored in Recovery Program, Says Spokesman.

Declaring citizens associations throughout the Nation have been "omitted from consideration" in the recovery program, the Interfederation Conference, representing 50,000 consumers in the Washington Metropolitan area, last night called upon Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for equal voice with industry, labor and agriculture at recovery conference tables.

The request was made in the form of letters written by Stephen James, of Montgomery County, chairman of the Interfederation Conference. The contents of the communication were identical and were approval by the delegates.

Price Rises Suspected.

Advancing prices, the letters said, led to a belief that "these prices are often greater than need be, and we further suspect that not all of the increase finds its way back to the class or individual in whose behalf it is assessed."

"Further," said the letter, "it is my opinion that the consumer has been inadequately represented in the promulgation of codes, processing taxes and other features of the recovery program, through no fault, necessarily, of those representing the consumer in your councils, but because of a major defect in the recovery structure that fails to give the consumer equal voice with industry, labor and the farmer.

Sees Consumers Ignored.

"Industry has trained counselors at conference tables. Labor has demanded and received a fair share of attention at your hands. The farmer is organized and vocal through farm organizations. But the bona fide consumer has had little more than theoretical consideration."

James G. Yaden, representing the District Federation of Citizens Associations, told the conference his organization is planning early and decisive action with regard to the proposed Anacostia Junior High and Woodrow Wilson Senior High Schools.

800 in U. S. Pay Cheer Demand To Restore Cut

Sen. McCarren Sees Early Return of Wage Slash by Congress.

Eight hundred persons cheered demands of speakers for restoration of the 15 per cent Federal pay cut last night at a mass meeting in Central High School sponsored by the American Federation of Government Employes.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, sounded the keynote by declaring good government could not be expected from "starving employes." He predicted Congress promptly would return the wage slash. The speaker contended marked improvement in general conditions warranted such action.

Frequent cheers interrupted E. Claude Babcock, federation president, as he told of a National campaign for salary increases. He said Government employes were noted for efficiency and "ought to be paid an honorable wage."

"The cuts for Government workers, veterans and school teachers," Babcock declared, "originally were proposed by men whose annual legal income tax, if they paid it, would be greater than the average salaries of the people cut. Nobody can logically defend the Government pay cut."

James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said his organization voted in favor of Federal pay cut restoration after studying the situation. We urged workers to appeal to the "judgment and common sense of those in authority."

Score Volunteer Blood to Aid Girl

Post's Appeal Gets Many Offers for Hospital.

A score of volunteer blood-donors responded to an appeal through The Post and its news broadcaster yesterday, and provided an adequate supply to aid Miss Jean Sheers, 17, of 2544 Fourteenth street northwest, critically ill in Gallinger Hospital.

Physicians announced there is no further need for blood offers. Many of those who telephoned the hospital yesterday were tested as to type and ample blood was made available for the girl's future requirements.

A physician, asking that his name be withheld, appealed to The Post Sunday night in an effort to obtain aid for Miss Sheers. Members of her family submitted to three previous transfusions.

Cancer Death Guilt Denied By 2 Doctors

A Washington physician and his associate, charged with manslaughter, sat in Rockville Circuit Court yesterday to hear opening testimony in the State's attempt to prove a woman patient died as a result of their "secret cancer cure."

Under grand jury indictments since last month, Dr. Harry R. Street, of Washington, and Dr. Sherwood Ferris, of Chevy Chase, Md., pleaded not guilty in connection with the death of Mrs. Cora L. Britton last May.

Poison Ointment Blamed.

Dr. Britton was the first to testify. He told of the development of symptoms by Mrs. Britton which might or might not indicate a malignant growth and subsequent visits to physicians in New Jersey. When Mrs. Britton declined to submit to treatment suggested by the Atlantic City surgeon, Dr. Britton said he took her to Dr. Street on advice of friends.

Dr. Street, it was testified, told of his "cure" and sent Mrs. Britton to the home of Dr. Ferris for treatment.

Two weeks later, Dr. Britton declared, he went to visit his wife and found her condition "shocking and horrible." He said he realized her condition was critical and she had not long to live.

"I never believed she was suffering from cancer," he said.

Pneumonia Held Cause.

Joseph C. Cissel, attorney for the defense, in his opening statement claimed that Mrs. Britton's death was due to pneumonia, a bad liver, septic condition and "complications."

Both Dr. Street and Dr. Ferris, Cissel declared, had used the identical "secret salve" with success on a large number of other patients.

The use of zinc chloride, claimed by the State to be the principal ingredient in the salve, does not meet approval of the medical profession, according to the testimony of Dr. George McLean, of Baltimore, who treated Mrs. Britton at South Baltimore General Hospital.

He said that when Mrs. Britton was examined upon admittance to the hospital, it was found she suffered from fourth-degree burns of a serious nature.

Jury Quickly Selected.

Dr. Walter D. Wise, Baltimore surgeon, testified that when he first saw Mrs. Britton she was "desperately ill." He said she had kidney trouble, which he contended was the result of poisoning from the zinc chloride.

Selection of the jury took less than an hour. State's Attorney Stedman Prescott declared the State would prove that Mrs. Britton's death was caused by use of the salve "cure." Among the ingredients, he said, was one of the most powerful caustics known to chemistry.

Use of that particular salve, Prescott said, was abandoned by the medical profession years ago. He also alleged that Mrs. Britton was not the victim of cancer, but a less virulent growth.

Testimony will be continued today.

Alexandria Woman Held After Baby Is Abandoned

Nurse Helen Lentz, of Gallinger Hospital, is shown holding the two abandoned infants. Jane Doe (left), found yesterday, was said by police to be the child of Mrs. Irvin Dieter, whom police traced to Alexandria and placed under arrest. The other infant, still identified only as Mary Doe, was found in a hallway last week.

Mysterious Call Prompts Police to Trail and Arrest Suspect.

A mysterious inquiry regarding an abandoned 3-week-old baby at Gallinger Hospital yesterday afternoon led Washington and Alexandria police on a tangled trail last night, resulting in the arrest of an Alexandria woman as reputed mother of the infant.

Within 12 hours after the child was found on the front porch of the home of Policeman H. H. Miller, 1733 B street southeast, Mrs. Irvin Dieter was taken to Alexandria police headquarters where, according to police, she confessed to deserting the baby. Later, she was brought to police headquarters here and questioned.

Mrs. Dieter, police said, was traced through a telephone call to Gallinger Hospital. She was arrested at the home of her mother, 119 South Asaph street, Alexandria.

In her reputed confession, Mrs. Dieter said she was in dire circumstances and had all she could do to care for a 3-year-old son. Her husband, she said, was committed to the Virginia State Penitentiary at Richmond a short time ago.

The woman was arrested by Sergt. Frederick Kaus, of the Alexandria police. Local authorities said they communicated with Alexandria after receiving information as to the whereabouts of Mrs. Dieter.

The infant was still in Gallinger Hospital early today. Nurses had named her Jane Doe.

CWA Appeal Of Unions Fails

Ruml Rejects Demand That Labor Offices Should Dispense Jobs.

Labor unions should be given opportunity to fill C. W. A. jobs calling for union men, the Washington Building Trades Union urged yesterday at a conference with David I. Ruml, head of the reemployment office.

The unions were represented by a committee headed by John Locher, who said afterward that Mr. Ruml had refused to agree that such a practice was in accord with rules of the C. W. A. At present only those registered at the employment service headquarters are assigned to jobs as requests for workers are received. The assignment is made by Mr. Ruml. He has successfully defeated efforts of the District Commissioners to have the procedure changed.

Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday settled the dispute over who shall supervise employment of women. Capt. Howard F. Clark, assistant Engineer Commissioner and executive officer of the local administration, will retain supervision, the Commissioner said.

The question was raised by Miss Mary E. Stocking, who insisted that she had been appointed director of women's civil works projects and should be permitted to take over supervision.

Allen Is Boastful Of 80 Golf Score At Burning Tree

Commissioner George E. Allen was a proud and happy man yesterday as he recounted how he had taken a six on a par three hole, but had negotiated the Burning Tree golf course in 80 the day before.

What horses are to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, golf is to Commissioner Allen and the 80 was his best score. Some one suggested he might have missed counting a stroke or so.

"Not a chance," he replied. "Not with the crowd I was playing with. It was costing them money. That crowd wouldn't let you get away with anything like that. They wouldn't even give you a 6-inch putt. If I had been lucky I would have had a 76."

Rep. Parker Fails to Gain.

City Schools Turn to U. S. For Hot Food

Two Welfare Workers to Prepare Federal Relief Plan.

The cost of supplying hot lunches to Washington's 4,000 needy school children is expected to exceed $25,000 and can be met only through Federal relief funds, District officials said last night.

The possibility of undertaking the work with private charity faded when Superintendent Frank W. Ballou revealed in his report that the need was much greater than any one had suspected.

Commissioner George A. Allen, who received the report, immediately asked George S. Wilson, director of public welfare and Leroy A. Halbert, emergency relief director, to work out a program for feeding the children, stating its cost and method of execution. The relief workers will recommend the task be financed by Federal relief funds, they said.

The program will be submitted to Commissioner Allen as soon as it is completed. It then must be approved by the entire District relief committee as a Federal relief project. The program can not be started until after the Christmas holidays.

Teachers Must Be Deputized.

Teachers, Commissioner Allen said, must be deputized as Federal case workers to determine the status of each case recommended by Dr. Ballou. Teachers, it was pointed out, virtually are doing this work now, but the official designation of "case worker" is necessary in order that the program may be financed by Federal relief.

Under the program expected to be formulated by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Halbert, the meals will be prepared from Federal surplus foods and the Civil Works Administration will employ jobless to prepare it and serve it in the schools. The lunches would be served in the elementary schools after the more fortunate pupils have left for the day.

Dr. Ballou pointed out that a problem will arise in the teachers' colleges, senior high schools and junior high schools. The lunch hour in these schools occurs during the school schedule, and the pupils being fed by Federal relief would have to be separated from other children and an independent account kept of the cost.

Most Needy in Grades.

In the past, these schools have cared for the needy pupils in cafeterias without outside aid, but principals of some of the schools indicated they would not be able to continue this.

Of the 4,000 children needing lunches, 3,788 are in elementary schools, and 212 are in vocational. Besides these there are 553 in junior high school, 281 in senior high and 46 in the teachers colleges.

Last winter, 1,939 elementary children were supplied with lunches, mainly with private charity. In the vocational schools there were 285, in junior high, 382; senior high, 304, and teachers' colleges, 23.

In a letter to Commissioner Allen, Superintendent Ballou described the situation as "a pressing social problem," demanding immediate attention. School officials, he said, will cooperate fully in meeting the situation.

Bonding Houses May Aid D. C. In Awarding Rum Licenses

Plan to Accept Their Risks on Moral Issue Is Put in Liquor Law.

The sleuthing of surety and bonding companies will reinforce police and other authorities having to do with issuing liquor licenses, under a provision tentatively written into the Commissioners' liquor law yesterday.

Applicants for all classes of liquor licenses will be required to file with their applications bonds guaranteeing their observance of the law, payment of taxes, payment of fines which might be imposed for violations, and similar provisions.

Only bonding and surety companies recognized by the Treasury would be acceptable. The purpose of this limitation is to assure a careful investigation of the life and character of the applicant by experienced private agencies such as are maintained by those concerns. This investigation would be in addition to inquiry by police and licensing authorities and would serve as a double check.

Commissioner George E. Allen said he believed the plan would help keep undesirables and "the hoodlum element" out of the liquor business. It would also make for increased observance of the law, he said.

The plan was discussed at meetings between the Commissioner and William W. Bride, corporation counsel, and Vernon E. West, principal assistant. Precedent for it was said to have been found in State laws. Amounts required of applicants would be based on the tax, license and penal provisions yet to be fixed.

Licenses are to be restricted to American citizens of legal age of good moral character who have not been convicted of a felony.

Michigan Basketers, Richmond Boxers Bow to Maryland Team

4,000 Fans See Terps in Twin Win

Wolverine Five Bows, 29 to 25; Trails at Half, 16 to 6.

Richmond U. Ringmen Lose Lead and Are Beaten, 4½ to 3½.

MARYLAND University's basket ball and boxing teams tasted competition for the first time this season and tasted the sweets of victory last night at Ritchie Coliseum before 4,000 approving fans. University of Michigan's touring court team was repulsed in a heart-throbbing fray, 29 to 25, and the Richmond University boxers succumbed to the Old Liners by 4½ points to 3½.

Victories in the final two bouts turned the tide for the Old Line boxers, McCaw scoring a technical knockout over Dobson to knot the string and Stalford slipping over a sleep-producing punch on Strong in the heavyweight class to give Maryland its winning margin.

Terps Lead, 16-6, at Half.

Both basket ball teams used a short passing attack, but Maryland's greater experience swung the tide its way. The Terps played circles around their Big Ten opponents in the first half, slipping through the Wolverine's defense for numerous snowbirds and dropping every pot shot they attempted, to lead, 16 to 6.

Rufus Vincent, center, led Maryland's attack, locating the bucket for five field goals and a foul, 11 points in all. Al Plummer, Michigan's center, was second in the point-scoring, with 9 points, the result of four field goals and a foul.

Michigan came out with a rush in the second half, and after Chase had converted a foul, sank three field goals and a foul in rapid succession to make the count 17 to 13, with the Terps leading. Snyder sank a field goal and Chase and Plummer converted the points on a double foul to make the score 22 to 14.

Michigan Five Rallies.

From then on Michigan had all the better of the battle. Tessmer and Tomango sank field goals and Jablonski dropped a foul, while Chase and Vincent counted from the floor for Maryland. But near the end of the game Michigan gradually began to creep up on its rival. Ford, with a field goal and a foul, boosted Michigan's total to 22—and then to 25 with another foul and 2-pointer.

But Spider Chase sank a field goal and Bernie Buscher converted a foul to assure Maryland of the decision just before the fray ended.

Wells Outpoints Harris.

Will Wells, of Richmond, gave Richmond the lead in boxing with an easy decision over Joe Harris in the 115-pound class. Wells floored his rival in the second for a count of nine and again in the third for a five count. Harris, his face smeared with blood, put up a gallant fight, but was not the equal of Wells. The decision was unanimous.

Referee Heine Miller called the second bout involving Dave Scott, of Richmond, and Harry Carroll, of Maryland, a draw, although the Richmond boy appeared to have the better of the melee. Both men were down for a count, Carroll in the first round for nine and Scott in the second for three. These boys weighed 125 pounds.

Dick Babcock, a Washington youth, evened the count for Maryland with a well deserved victory over Winfred Courtney in the 135-pound class.

Richmonders Take Lead.

Richmond again assumed the lead when Younger Saunders won the decision over Milton Abarbanel. Not many blows were struck, but the Richmond boy struck the only two committed in the first two rounds to pile up his advantage.

Maryland knotted the string when Lyman McAboy knocked out Stan Fink, 155-pounder, in the third round with a stiff blow under the heart. It was a stiff blow, and though Fink attempted to rise, he was too badly injured to do so.

Vaughn K. O.'s Hawkins.

But Richmond was shoved ahead in the very next bout, which saw Frank Vaughn score a technical knockout over Frank Hawkins in the first round of their bout.

Stewart McCaw won the next bout for Maryland, stopping Jack Dobson in the third round on a technical knockout. Dobson possessed a terrific punch in either hand, but McCaw had more ring experience and he used it to an advantage. McCaw went down for a count in the first round, from a savage left, but remained at a safe distance thereafter and outpointed his rival by a wide margin.

In the final, decisive, and by all means most spectacular bout of the night, Carl Stalfort, fighting his first scrap for Maryland, knocked out Jim Strong, Richmond's heavyweight, in the third round of their brawl with a haymaking right.

Bailey Sinking; Strain Begins To Tell

General Condition Worse; Blood Transfusion Not Needed.

Boston (Tuesday), Dec. 19 (AP).—Irving (Ace) Bailey, Toronto hockey player injured in a recent game here, took a turn for the worse at 1 a. m. today and Dr. Joseph Hahn, attending physician, was summoned to his bedside.

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (AP).—Irvin "Ace" Bailey, injured Toronto hockey player, tonight started giving way under the terrific strain of his two delicate brain operations and Dr. Donald Munro said his patient's life depended entirely on his superb vitality.

"His local brain condition," the surgeon's latest report said, "is well in hand and is not causing any trouble. But his general condition is not as good as it was. He is definitely weaker.

"He is now beginning to show the effects of the terrific strain he has been under, but I hope the nourishment he is getting by intravenous methods will be sufficient to pull him through the crisis. If he will act favorably to what is being done, he will pull through. It is all a matter of his condition and there is little we can do in a medical way."

Benefit for Mrs. Bailey.

Boston, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—The entire receipts of the Boston Bruins-Montreal Maroons National Hockey League game, to be played at Boston Garden tomorrow night, will be given to Mrs. Irvin Bailey, wife of the stricken Toronto player, it was announced tonight by President Charles Francis Adams, of the Bruins.

The Boston Garden has contributed its share of the receipts.

Hamilton Reported in Line For Coaching Job at Navy

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 18 (AP).—Local football circles heard today that Lieut. Tom Hamilton, stationed at San Diego aboard the U. S. S. Saratoga, may become coach at the U. S. Naval Academy, either next year or in 1935.

Coach Bill Ingram, of the University of California, former Navy coach, said he had heard Hamilton was in line for the position. Rip Miller is the present Navy coach.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 18 (Spl.).—Athletic officials of the Naval Academy refused either to affirm or to deny a report emanating from San Francisco that Lieut. Tom Hamilton, former star athlete here, would be assigned as football coach of the Middies.

Hamilton was a three-letter man when a Midshipman and won the athletic association sword for excellence in athletics.

San Diego, Calif., Dec. 18 (AP).—"It's news to me," said Lieut. Tom Hamilton today when told of reports that he may coach the United States Naval Academy football team in 1934 or 1935.

"I have received no previous intimation of a change at the academy," he added. He said he could see no reason for a change, but if one were made he "might like a try at the job." He and "Rip" Miller, present academy coach, are firm friends.

Hubbell Boosts Southpaw Stock—Red Sox Boast Five

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (AP).—Now that the once-ridiculed left-handed pitchers have come into their own, their ascent of the baseball ladder being climaxed by the coronation of Carl Hubbell as the outstanding athlete of the year, the rebuilt Boston Red Sox have an ample supply of them to dazzle American League opponents during the next pennant race.

Almost a year ago, when Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins bought out Bob Quinn's interests, they agreed that the lack of a consistent southpaw hurler was the cause of most of the Sox's misfortunes. In fact, Quinn told them that almost every cent he was able to Garner went for southpaws, few of whom were even able to finish a game.

Collins, as soon as he became general manager, started reviewing the Red Sox's ancient history. He had to go back to the days of "Dutch" Leonard, Ray Collins and the then pitching Babe Ruth to discover traces of competent southpaw hurlers in red hose. His research led him to believe that the Red Sox started slipping as soon as their portside pitching weakened.

Since Yawkey and Collins are both rabid American Leaguers, they must be excused for their failures to pay much attention to the great success southpaws have enjoyed in the National League. In their biased minds, Hubbell was just another good pitcher until he blasted the Washington Nationals, the Harridge circuit's pride, in the recent world series.

If, they said to themselves, one southpaw can do that to the Nats, what will four or five do to the rest of the American League? So that is probably the reason why they have five of them on their squad of 10, Bob "Lefty" Grove, George "Rube" Walberg, Bob Weiland, Heinie Ostermuller, last year's International League ace, and young Justin McLaughlin, hometown boy, who is fast rounding into major league caliber.

But Collins, despite his southpaw leanings, has not gone overboard. He has more than a generous quota of good right-handers, such as John "Dusty" Rhodes, George Pipgras, Henry Johnson and Johnny Welch. All those boys needed last season was a little more hitting in the pinches.

Browning, George Rassle to a Draw

The grapplers struggled through 1 hour, 40 minutes without a fall, the match finally being halted at 11:15 after Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, of the State Athletic Commission, had given permission for the bout to be extended 15 minutes beyond the 11 o'clock closing limit.

About 8,000 fans saw the match.

Other results: Vic Christie, 204, California, won by decision over Stanley Pinto, 203, Nebraska, 20:00; Ed (Strangler) Lewis, 245, Los Angeles, drew with Gus Sonnenberg, 205, Boston, 20:00; Rudy Dusek, 214, Omaha, and Sam Cordovano, 204, New York, drew, 20:00, and Ernie Dusek, 217, Omaha, threw Man Mountain Dean, 302, Georgia, 5:40.

Hubbell Is Voted Outstanding Star

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—The selection of Carl Owen Hubbell as the "man of the year" in all sports marks the second time the honor has gone to a major league baseball star in the three-year history of this annual Associated Press poll. Pepper Martin ran away with the contest in 1931.

The southpaw ace of the New York Gaints, who compiled the best record for pitching effectiveness in 17 years, was voted the outstanding man, amateur or professional, by a Nation-wide jury of sports editors and writers.

Caras, Ponzi Are Tied for Cue Lead

Delaware Youth Is Victor, 125-41; Greenleaf Beaten 7th Time.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18 (AP).—James Caras, 22-year-old sharpshooter from Wilmington, Del., tonight shot his way into a tie with Andrew Ponzi for first place in the world pocket billiards title tournament, defeating the stubby Philadelphian, 125 to 41, in 19 innings. Each has won six matches and lost two.

Ralph Greenleaf, of New York, a leader among pocket billiards players for the past 13 years, closed a disastrous compaign today by losing to William Mosconi, of Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia youngster took an early lead and although he played somewhat raggedly, won easily, -25 to 55, in 22 innings. Greenleaf, who won the last four tournaments, suffered his seventh defeat in nine matches. One of his setbacks resulted from disqualification in his match with Caras, last week.

Mosconi went into a tie with George Kelly, also of Philadelphia, for fourth place at five victories and three defeats. He had a high run today of 25, while the best Greenleaf could cluster was a 15. The latter left for New York tonight.

Dartmouth Abolishes Four Varsity Sports

Hanover, N. H., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Continuing its retrenchment program, the Dartmouth Athletic Council announced today the abolition of four varsity sports, two of which produced championship teams last season.

Tennis, golf, gymnasium and lacrosse felt the ax today. The announcement was tempered somewhat by the statement of Harry R. Heneage, director of athletics, that he hoped the reestablishment of these sports might occur "in the very near future."

Pay Demands Forced A's Shake-Up

Realization of Need of New Hurling Staff Also a Reason.

Mack Refutes Reports Bankers' Pressure Caused Action.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18 (AP).—Inability to pay what his "stars" demanded, and realization of the need of a new pitching staff, were reasons given today by Connie Mack for the break-up of his once championship Philadelphia Athletics.

Unburdening his mind for the first time, the veteran pilot of the A's insisted that published reports that he was forced to sell "by the bankers," were untrue.

"I wish you would do what you can to correct this impression," he asked baseball writers.

Called in Lefty Grove.

He told of realizing last season the need for a new pitching staff, and of his expectation of building such a group around "Lefty" Grove, the American League's ace portside hurler, who was traded to the Boston Red Sox.

"When the team finished third this fall, winning the clinching game just before the schedule closed, I had Grove up here," Mack went on. "I told Mose I could not pay him the same salary any longer. I told him we would have to cut down; that business at the ball parks was no longer what it had been.

"I told him to think it over—I made him a proposition at the time—and said, 'Come and see me tomorrow morning.' Well, Grove never came back. I have not seen him since.

Three Didn't Appear.

"Then, the last Saturday we were here, I called each of the players into my office, discussed the same things with them. Only three didn't come—Grove, Walberg and Earnshaw, the latter of whom I did not intend to keep."

Walberg, another left-hand pitcher, also was traded to Boston last week, along with Grove and Infielder Max Bishop. Earnshaw went to the Chicago White Sox.

Mack said that when he told Bishop of the "situation," the veteran second-baseman wrote him a letter asking to be traded because he "had been with the A's 10 years or more, and that he felt such a period was long enough for any player with one team."

Worked Hard With A's.

"Mickey has been with us nine years," he said. "He worked hard; harder than most of them during those pennant-winning days. So I thought 'should I stand in the way of this boy when he has a chance to go on?' I thought that as long as he will have to take a salary cut here, and has given us all this service, I'll let him go."

Mack, who will be 71 next Saturday, insisted he is not breaking up his ball club.

"In my opinion, anybody who thinks so is all wrong," he said. "We lose a lot in Grove and Cochrane and the rest, but we have funds with which to rebuild. We have spent a considerable portion already for new players."

He promised that "no player with us today, who would strengthen a major league club, will be sold before the close of the 1934 season."

Godwin Signed to Fight Rosenbloom Thursday

Bob Godwin, local light-heavyweight, has been signed to box Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight champion, in a ten-pound nontitle bout at West Palm Beach Thursday. In three previous nontitle bouts, Godwin has lost one decision and held the champion to two draws.

In a title bout at Madison Square Garden last winter, Godwin entered the ring with two badly cut eyes, which Rosenbloom immediately flicked open, necessitating the stopping of the bout in the fourth round. Depending on his showing in Thursday's bout, Godwin may be given another shot at Rosenbloom's title in the Garden this winter.

Marshall Planning $500,000 Mat Suit

Kansas City, Dec. 18 (AP).—Everett Marshall, Colorado wrestler, said here today he planned to file a $500,000 damage suit against the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission as a result of its action in suspending him pending an examination to determine whether or not he is sane.

The Pennsylvania Commission suspended Marshall following a match with Jim Londos at Philadelphia Friday night. Suffering from what was described as a "mental lapse," the Coloradoan swung on the referee and others who entered the ring.

The wrestler said the commission's insanity accusation had given him "a black eye."

G. W. to Play Vanderbilt On Grid

Game Will Be Played at Griffith Stadium on November 3.

THE second major Southern opponent to grace George Washington University's 1934 football schedule is Vanderbilt, The Post learned last night. The game will be played at Griffith Stadium, November 3.

Dr. Daniel LeRoy Borden, toastmaster at the Colonials' annual football banquet Saturday night, said that the list would include "two major Southern opponents and one from the West." He added that the remaining games would "be on par with these."

Louisiana State, runner-up for the Southeastern Conference championship, is the other team from the cotton belt scheduled by G. W. This game will be played in Washington on November 10.

Beat Terps in 1931.

Perennial contender for the Southern championship, Vanderbilt's last appearance on District soil was in November, 1931, at Griffith Stadium, where it defeated the University of Maryland, 39 to 12. The year before the teams clashed at Nashville, Vanderbilt winning that game also.

The 1933 Commodore eleven did not fare so well, winning four games, losing three, and tying three. Cumberland, North Carolina, Georgia Tech and Sewanee were conquered, while games were lost to Ohio State, Tennessee and Alabama. Louisiana State, Mississippi State, and Oklahoma were tied.

On Way to Coast.

It is deemed significant that Coach Jim Pixlee found it expedient to depart for the West on the eve of the banquet, at which he was to speak. Pixlee's goal is the Pacific Coast, where he will confer with athletic authorities of California University, Los Angeles Branch, and Stanford. His itinerary also includes stop-overs at several Midwestern schools.

Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University, visited the coast last summer and is believed to have made the opening wedge in negotiations between a coast school and G. W. for a football game. The Colonials could have scheduled U. C. L. A. during the past season, but did not desire to shoulder the financial responsibilities resulting from such a tie-up. The conviction that Washington fans will support a national football attraction, however, had altered G. W.'s view of the matter.

Pixlee is not expected to return until after the Christmas holidays, when the card will be completed.

Joe Jackson Friends Seek Reinstatement

Greenville, S. C., Dec. 18 (AP).—"Shoeless Joe" Jackson, who once slugged his way to baseball's heights only to be barred from professional ball because of his connection with the notorious Black Sox baseball scandal of 1919, has hopes of reinstatement.

Friends of Jackson, headed by Mayor John M. Mauldin of Greenville, have appealed to Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's high commissioner, and said today they expected a ruling within a few days.

Jackson has made several appearances in semipro ball in this section.

This Mornin

With Shirley L. Povich.

I SEE by the papers th Gentleman Gene Tunney, a few ill-chosen words b tween courses at the All-Ame can sports dinner at the Ho Astor, is inclined to remark: " for Dempsey, I believe he shou retire instead of staying in picture and chiseling and reta ing the progress of contenders."

That's gratitude for you, or meaning of the word has escap this department. Because Manassa Mauler did not have good fortune to wed an heir and retire to the slippered e of a Connecticut estate, the m he led by the hand into the m lion-dollar fight class lets one below the belt.

Gentleman Gene was referri of course, to the Maxie-Ba Dempsey hook-up, which Madis Garden is trying to overcome order to promote a Baer-Carn championship bout, which wo mean weaning Baer away fr the man who lifted him up pugilistic ladder.

Animosity Runs Deep.

This Dempsey-Tunney anim ity runs deep apparently. E dently Gentleman Gene is not clined to forget the battle of "Long Count" at Chicago, fr which Dempsey emerged the p ular figure and still the champ in the eyes of the Great Americ Fight Public who saw or heard Tunney's back-pedaling in wh he stole a lap on popularity.

Anyway, Gentleman Gene inclined to remark further th "If Baer desires to help Demps (Ancil Hoffman, Maxie's manag has asserted that Jack must figu in the promotion of a Carn contest), he must wait until he champion. As challenger, B should come to Carnera."

Also that: "I don't belie Baer can beat the Italian. stands with his feet too far ap and is too slow. The man w topples Carnera will be a ha and fast hitter like Dempsey. don't believe Carnera wou have lasted three minutes w Dempsey."

A-ha! There's a trace of tribu there. But, hark! Tunney go on: "Jack would have taken a vantage of Primo and probab stowed him away with a 'snea punch delivered on the breal

Retirements Compared.

Tunney's speech was made u der the heading of "Wha Wrong With Boxing?" As Ge tleman Gene elucidated, apparen ly the major fault with prese day boxing is Dempsey. Le look and see.

Since leaving the ring, what h Tunney contributed to the spo that gave him his start to wealt Right.

Since leaving the ring, Dem sey has revived interest in bo ing in all sections of the cou try by virtue of his personal a pearances. He took Max Baer big awkward playboy who kne little or nothing about boxin and cared less, coached him aft the Garden and others had giv him up, and lifted him into t front rank of challengers for t world title.

If any person is entitled to reward for Baer's success, would seem that it is the Mauler. Anway, what is Tu ney's interest in the promotion the fight by the Garden? Perha Gentleman Gene is doing a bit chisling himself? Tsk, tsk, Tu ney.

Dempsey Made Tunney.

If this department remembe rightly, it was Dempsey who co sented to give Tunney his on chance at the title. Before Tu ney took the crown from Ja at the Sequi in 1926, the fi time the title ever changed han on a decision, Gentleman Ge was but a third-rate heavyweigh who had lost a decision to Har Greb, an overstuffed middl weight.

Dempsey put Tunny in the b money when Gentleman Ge took down a moderate end of t gate of $1,895,723, pai l to s Dempsey perform; not Tunne For his efforts the following ye at Chicago, when Tunney w down and out at the count ten, Gentleman Gene accepte $990,000 of the gate of $2,650,00 built up not by Tunney but b Dempsey.

That Gentleman Gene owe these big gates to Dempsey is a parent after a squint at th figures of his only championsh title defense in a bout in whic Dempsey did not figure. Again Tom Heeney in his farewell a pearance, Tunney drew but $691 014 and the Garden lost mons on the match.

Barry-Rugirello Feature Fight at Portner's Tonight Regarded as Toss-Up

Odds of 5-6 Are Offered On Each

Barry's Handlers Take Steps to Have Him in Best of Form.

IF betting odds are any criterion, the ten-round bout at Portner's tonight between Donald "Reds" Barry and Salvatore Rugirello is a toss-up. The prevailing odds are 5 to 6 and take your choice.

Barry is generally conceded a distinct edge in speed and ring generalship, but many are firm in the belief that at least once during the ten rounds Rugirello will land one of his powerful punches—and just once is usually enough.

Barry's handlers are sincere in their efforts to pop the Southeast redhead into the ring in the best possible condition, and their efforts along this line, while more or less amusing, may have a distinct effect on the outcome of the bout.

Barry to Be at Best.

In the opinion of those guiding the career of the sorrel-thatched one, most of Barry's poor showings in local rings have been attributable to a tendency on his part to break training in this, his home town. This time he is being kept in New York until the last minute to forestall any let-up in the training grind.

The one poor fight that Barry has perpetrated on the local fans that is not attributable to lack of training is the last one against Bob Godwin, for which the Southeast firecracker entered the ring with a badly abscessed ear. It is to his credit that he did not at the time, and has not since, alibied, even though, in this instance, he had a justifiable excuse for his poor showing.

Rugirello has lost fights, of course, but the fights he has won more than overshadow in importance the fights he has lost. His knockouts of Walter Cobb and Stanley Poreda stamp him as a dangerous opponent to any fighter, and his knockout of Gypsy Daniels, who once rocked Max Schmeling to sleep, while not so significant, means something.

Good at Any Distance.

Rugirello's 20-round draw with Larry Gaines and ten-round draw with Poalino Uzcudun stamp him as a worthy opponent over any distance, and indicate that he does not have to win by a knockout to perform creditably. Based strictly on his record, many have sized him up as a big, fast heavyweight, who can punch, box and take it.

The six-round semifinal between Henry Irving and Benny Edell promises much in the way of fast action, with Irving's right hand a constant threat to his more experienced opponent. Whether Irving's right will be effective against Edell remains to be seen, as the New York boy fought a close battle with Arthur Huttick in New York two years ago, and Arthur Huttick is head and shoulders above Irving as a fighter.

Another interesting six-rounder offers Walter Kirkwood against Big Boy Smith, the Eastern Shore walloper. Smith packs a wicked wallop, but Kirkwood has a head crammed full of ring lore and boxing knowledge—and therein lies the contest.

Two fours, featuring Baby Charles and Joes Raspi and Roma la Bona against Wild Bill Howell will round out the bill.

Poll Votes Home Run by Ott Greatest '33 Thrill-Provider

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Mel Ott, the quiet, unassuming boy from Louisiana's bayous, gave the Nation its greatest athletic thrill in 1933 when he batted a home-run in the tenth inning of the fifth game to give the New York Giants the World Series title.

This conclusion was reached in a tabulation today of the votes cast by sports editors in the Annual United Press Sports Poll. The voters, representing newspapers in every State, covered nearly all of the Nation's competitive sports. Tennis alone, of the major games, was omitted.

Ott's homer constituted one of the most dramatic moments baseball has know in recent years. With the score tied at 3-3 in the tenth inning of what proved to be the final game, and with two men out and none on base, Ott blasted a pitch into deep center. Outfielder Schulte, of Washington, raced back to make a catch. He leaped for the ball as it cleared the center field bleacher fence, and tumbled, over the fence, into the stands. Umpire Pfirman signalled Ott to remain at second, believing a ground rule called for two bases, but after a consulation Ott was waved home, and the Giants won the championship.

28 Name Ott's Homer.

The vote was on the question: "What single incident gave you the biggest thrill in sports of 1933?" Of the 176 who voted, 28 named Ott's homer.

Second was Notre Dame's blocked punt which gave the Irish an upset football victory over the Army. A total of 25 votes were cast for this incident.

Football and boxing tied for fourth. Twelve votes were cast for Red Franklin's 95-yard opening kickoff run for Oregon State against Fordham, and a like number went to Max Baer's victory over Max Schmeling. One vote behind was "Notre Dame's victory over Army," and two notches behind, with nine votes, came Jimmy McLarnin's knockout over young Corbett.

Eight For Double Play.

Eight votes each were cast for the double play ending the world series, and for Brokers Tip's victory in the Kentucky Derby. Lefty O'Doul's pinch hit in the sixth inning of the second world series game rated six votes, and five each went to Bill Corbus's field goal for Stanford against U. S. C., Stanford's goal line stand against California, and Mike Sebastian's 75-yard run for Pitt against Notre Dame.

One voter, from Wenatchee, Wash., wrote: "This one's peculiar but it was a little half-breed Indian's ride on a raging, twisting outlaw horse named Dynamite. His name was Mathew Dick, and that ride was something to watch."

Central Rallies To Nose Out G. U. Prep

Wins, 33-28, in Spurt in Final Minutes of Play; Gregorio Stars.

IN the big preholiday scholastic basket ball tilt, Central High defeated Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park Yesterday, 33-28. The game was a free for all, with the Hoyettes coming from behind toward the end of the first half to take a 15-14 lead but to lose out in the final minutes of play on a quartet of Central field goals.

Mario Gregorio, star left forward of the Central team, was the "big shot" of the game, snagging a half-dozen baskets and an equal number of charity flings for 18 points. Tommy Keating was the outstanding star for the Preppers, hooking a pair of two-pointers and a half-dozen fouls, for 10 points.

At the end of the third period, the Georgetown team held a 21-18 advantage, but classy basket tossing by Gregorio soon had the game deadlocked at 25-all. Maury Nee came through with a mid-floor shot to put the Garrett team ahead, but then Mount Pleasant five shot into the lead with the four baskets to sew up the game.

High School Highlights

CHARLEY FREER, Emerson Institute's tip-off star, is ailing with blistered feet, which is the reason for his absence from the team lineup the past three games, according to Harley Sanborn, coach.

The St. Alban's soccer team has been practicing for the past three weeks in an effort to be on tap for a gruelling campaign which gets underway immediately after the Christmas holidays. The schedule, which will be made up principally of Baltimore schools, will be announced in a few days.

Last year Central High School added lacrosse to its sports curricula. Whether the sport will continue is not assured as yet. The team had remarkably fine success its first year, losing only the opener to the Maryland State scholastic champion, Boy's Latin of Baltimore, and knocking off several Oyster City institutions as well as Catonsville High, Annapolis High and Severn School.

Friday marks the close of the preholiday scholastic basket ball tuneup and the last games played this year, except for Central's game at Trenton, N. J., Saturday. However, the local high schools will continue practice throughout the Christmas vacation period. Competitive play will begin following the return to classes, which gives the local public high cagers a single week to get in shape for the inter-high tilts which begin Tuesday, January 9.

Glancing over the court slate for today, it appears that every school in the District and territory is billed for play. Western and Eastern, alone, remain idle. Central clashes with St. John's at the Keydets' cage; Tech entertains McDonough School of Baltimore, and Roosevelt meets Takoma-Silver Spring on the latter's hardwoods. In the prep school division, Friends scrimmages with Gonzaga in the latter's opening tilt of the current season; Emerson stacks up against Alexandria in the Alexandria Armory and Georgetown Prep plays Kendall School at Garrett Park.

In other settos outside the local realm, Gaithersburg battles Rockville at Rockville; Lee-Jackson stacks up against Charlotte Hall in Baltimore and Washington-Lee High plays a strictly "home encounter" with the Faculty.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

There are four teams in the Phi Sigma Epsilon (Ladies) League, which holds forth at the Arcadia drives every Monday night. The teams are named Teams No. 1, 2, 3 and 4. An unusual order of the standing of the league before last night's matches showed Team No. 4 in first place, No. 3 in second, No. 2 in third and No. 1 in fourth.

With R. Floyd topping the list of individual feats with a 105 game and 300 set, the last-place Team No. 1 annexed team laurels with a 371 game and 1,042 set.

"Dutch" Sherbahn (Presbyterian, No. 1) rolled the high individual game and set with 147 and 382, respectively. Catholic Missions came through with a 555 game and 1,619 set to win the first place position.

Two veteran duckpinners stole the show in the Federal League at Arcadia. Andy Goddard (Navy Yard), turned in a 157 game and Jimmy Jolliffe (Internal Revenue), added a 392 set to share individual honors. Commerce, after losing three last week, came back to sweep its match with Bureau of Investigation, rolling a 621 game and 1,701 set for the best team scores.

Rhode Island Avenue, No. 1, aided by Kline's 135 game and 362 set, annexed team honors in the Methodist Protestant Church League at Arcadia, rolling a 555 game and 1,579 set.

"Little San," sitting back practically unheard of in the obscurity of his barber shop on Fourteenth street, rose up to his full 4½ feet, banged his small fist on the chair and shouted, "what I want is just and proper recognition of local talent. No one gives a hoot about whether or not Tronsky misses a spare, or some New England team just missed a record set, or more ducks fly over the Atlantic than over the Pacific.

"What we want to read is the achievements of our own District bowlers and credit given where it is due." Thus emphatically spoke "Little San," backer and glorifier of Eddie Espie, Joe Pricci, Bill Krauss, Charlie Walson and Johnny Anderson, his Lucky Strike Barbers.

Bay State Body Suspends Buckley

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—A six-months suspension as boxing manager in this State was drawn today by Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, former world heavyweight champion, and Andy Callahan, middleweight contender.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission clamped the suspension on Buckley because he had charged it with falsifying Callahan's weight before the recent bout with Vince Dundee, middleweight champion. Callahan's weight was announced as 152½ pounds but Bucley said, after the bout, that his boxer actually weighed only 141 pounds.

In announcing the suspension the commission indicated that Buckley's license might have been revoked completely if he had not retracted, through his attorney, the weight charges. At a hearing before the State Commissioner, Buckley had produced a 10-pound weight which he said had been placed on the scales to boost his boxer's poundage. The commission held the charge was groundless for lack of evidence. It was learned at another hearing today that no member of the commission, except Mitchell Hambro, its agent, had been present at the weighing. Newspapermen were barred, an unusual procedure.

Altrock Takes Blind Bogey Golf Lead

The 58-year-old baseball comedian-coach posted a 75—4—71 over the week-end, to assume a two-stroke lead over his nearest rival, Frank Taylor, who had 82—9—73. Eddie Berkheimer had the next lowest score, an 83—6—77.

B. Harry Graham, course manager, has extended the blind bogey tournament. Players will be able to compete Friday, Saturday and Sunday, he announced. They may play as many as two rounds, selecting their own handicaps. A number between 67 and 87 will be chosen. The entrance fee is 25 cents.

A combination of a challenge and "grudge" golf match that has been hanging fire for several weeks will materialize this afternoon at 1 o'clock at Rock Creek. Al Houghton, of Kenwood, leading professional money winner in this section, will team with Walter R. McCallum, of Washington Golf and Country Club, against Al Price, Rock Creek pro, and George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring.

Quite a gallery is expected to follow the four combatants. Houghton and McCallum earned quite a name for themselves a few days before the last National Capital Open championship by defeating Denny Shute, British Open champion, and Jimmy Hines, Glens Falls titleholder, 4 and 3, in an 18-hole match.

The heavy fog that enveloped Washington's golf courses Sunday failed to slow up traffic along the fairways and greens.

A unique system of handling traffic at Indian Spring was employed. Professional Diffenbaugh reports. One whistle indicated that the fairway was clear for a drive; two whistles that the players had already holed out on the greens.

A beautification program is on at Beaver Dam Country Club. Members have donated money for the planting of trees around the clubhouse and at various points along the golf course. Already ten trees have been planted in the back of the clubhouse.

Normal Downs A. U. Quint, 33-19

AMERICAN University, completely devoid of left-overs from last year's sterling court five, bowed to defeat in its debut in the American U. Gym last night, before the onslaught of the orange and white cagemen of Maryland State Normal, 33 to 19.

While the 1933 edition of the Eagles' floormen was putting on its initial floor act, the sterlings of the 1932 club were perched in the stands watching the sad proceedings.

It was the dead eye of Tom Wheeler, star center of the invading Teachers, that put a crimp into the general all-round play of the local five, by gumming up the Eagle passing attack at odd occasions, nine in all, dripping baskets through the hoop. The elongated lad, sorrel-topped, whipped over 18 points on the hardwoodmen from Nebraska and Massachusetts avenues.

Bob Hill Outstanding.

For American, Bob Hill, Eagle center, was the outstanding lad on the floor. He managed to sink four pretty shots from the floor.

The game started slowly with a 4-4 count resting for the greater part of the half. However, the passing attack of the Normalites began to function more smoothly as play progressed and it was during this interim that Mister Wheeler began his field-goal barrage. At half-time the count stood 21-8.

Headgear for Hockey Players Is Planned

Detroit, Dec. 18 (A.P.).—A headgear for hockey players, similar to those worn by football players and one which would prevent such injuries as those suffered by Irvin ("Ace") Bailey, of the Toronto Maple Leafs, is being designed by Jack Adams, manager of the Detroit Red Wings.

Adams revealed his plans for the headgear today. He said he and his trainer, "Honey" Walker, have had the idea for some time and that several prominent Detroit brain specialists have agreed that such a headgear would have averted the injury suffered by Bailey.

Dornoch Scores Fourth Victory in Five Starts in Feature at Charles Town

Gelding Cops In Sprint by 4 Lengths

Vacillate Second and Jesting Third; Winner Pays $7.00.

Heavy Going Just Suits Aged Hoofs of Water Lad and Duelist.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 18.—If the millions of children who are waiting for Santa Claus could have heard a remark made by W. G. Merion here today, I'm afraid they would load up on spinach and beat the stuffing out of him. What Mr. Merion said was, "I hope Christmas never comes."

Now, that's a pretty broad statement, but those of us who believe we know our horses will agree with Mr. Merion that December 25, which marks the closing of this track, will end a string of successes bordering on the sensational.

In fact, if by any chance, Mr. Merion can have this meeting extended another month we may find Dornoch, his chestnut gelding, ready to canter home in front of Winnooka, Chase Me and Dark Secret. Dornoch arrived at this course stamped as a $600 selling plater and with a week left of the session bids to leave branded as a stake horse.

Fourth Win in Five Starts.

But to go into a long story the short way, Dornoch today made it four victories in five starts hereabouts, and one has to stretch his imagination to call it a horse race. Drawing away as Jockey Sage pleased, Dornoch crossed the finish line four lengths in advance of the favored Vacillate and eight lengths ahead of the well-played Jesting.

Dornoch first began singing "I like mountain race tracks" on December 5, when he hot-footed home ahead of a $600 group, including Holland and others. Two days later, he met the same kind and easily defeated, among others, Semester. On the eleventh of the month, the son of Donnacona and Dearie, moved into the $800 class and was second to energetic Boy. However, last Friday, he asserted his supremacy of this division by flittering in five lengths ahead of Renaissance.

Today, Dornoch was entered for $2,500, thank you, and he ran like a $5,000 horse. He paid a $7 mutuel.

Daily Double Pays $22.40.

Week-end rains left the track muddy and sticky. The weather was ideal overhead and one of the best week-day crowds of the meeting saw the program.

Forceful, the property of Mrs. F. M. Watts, of Washington, made a joke of the first race, a five furlong sprint for 2-year-olds. Jockey Snyder broke the St. James colt on top and he had a sixteenth of a mile advantage at one stage. Through the stretch, Snyder was pulling up. Beaten some eight lengths was Dolice, which finished three lengths in front of Cantroud. The winner was a favorite at a $4.20 mutuel.

Pays $54.40 for Place.

Postman Home, in the second position, presented a $54.40 place price. Beau Cavalier was third. Water Lad, an 8-year-old, in charge of Bardales, gained steadily and took command when Happy Lope, the early pace-setter, folded.

Duelist, now 9 years old, accounted for the third race. With mud under his hoofs, the veteran son of War Cloud came from far back in the field to collar Suspicious and draw out to a length and a half victory. Suspicious was second and Rod Rack third. There was some crowding of the first two in the stretch, but the stewards failed to listen to the foul claim of Jockey Knapp. The winner paid $7.20.

Sergeant Hill, no great shakes heretofore, found his racing legs in the mud to beat No Mistake and Swaggerstick in the fifth race, rewarding with an $18.20 mutuel. He circled the leaders entering the stretch and drew away.

Nisia moved up with a rush on the back stretch and coasted in ahead of Bokie B. and Postponement in the sixth race. The pay-off was $13.40.

Electric Gaff won the final in a race which was marked by a spectacular fall. Hacky H. tumbled at the turn and Hosain fell over him. Palumbo and Fowler escaped serious enjury.

$2,210,071 Was Bet At Tanforan Meeting

San Bruno, Calif., Dec. 18 (AP).—Figures released today by Ralph MacArthur, general manager of Tanforan track, showed a pari-mutuel "handle" of $2,210,071 for the 40-day meeting concluded yesterday. The revenue to the State was $88,402.84.

The smallest handle was $25,710, recorded during the opening week, while the largest was $117,899, taken in during yesterday's program. The daily average was $53,904. It was the first long meeting under the new pari-mutuel lag. Tanforan Co., Ltd., suffered a substantial loss, officials said.

English Cricketers Win.

Bombay, India, Dec. 18 (AP).—England today defeated India by nine wickets in the first official test cricket match ever held between the two countries. The scores were, India, 219 and 258; England, 438 and 40.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

During the reign of Philip III of Spain formal etiquette advanced to such a degree that its practice became absurd. Every action, every gesture followed some rigid rule, and to break any rule of etiquette was unthinkable. It was because of this impossible formality that Philip contracted his fatal illness.

The king, seated before an open fireplace in the royal apartment, nearly roasted when the fire became too hot. It was against all rules of etiquette that the king should retreat from a fire, therefore his only recourse was to have the fire put out. None of the royal servants dared to enter his apartment, for that was against the rules of etiquette. After a time the Marquis de Pobar came into the apartment and the king ordered him to put out the fire. Of course, the marquis would have liked to oblige, but etiquette forbade—the privilege of extinguishing fires in the royal apartments was reserved solely for the Duke d' Useda, and the duke at that moment was on a hunting trip in Catalonia.

The fire continued to burn and the king continued to sit in front of it. Next day he was taken ill, shortly afterward he died—a royal martyr to rigid rules of etiquette.

Eli Whitney was in Georgia at the home of a friend preparing to begin work as a teacher when another guest, who had heard of Whitney's ability as a mechanic, suggested that he invent a machine to separate cotton fiber from the seed. Up to that time Whitney had never examined raw cotton. He immediately began the work which resulted later in the invention of the cotton gin.

Christy Meets Sid Nabors On Mat

Card for Thursday Night Is Completed With Signing of Pair.

FAST-RISING youngsters in the rassle game will meet in a 30-minute time limit bout Thursday night when Promoter Joe Turner sponsors his benefit show for the D. C. Playground Department's Santa Claus Fund.

Having slated Gino Garibaldi and Jim Clinstock in the main event, Turner yesterday closed out his card with the matching of Vic Christy and Sid Nabors.

Already having earned himself an enviable reputation here as a result of past performances, young Christy likely will be thoroughly extended by Nabors. Though a newcomer, Sid has scored handsomely in other cities.

PORCEFUL, favoring the going and much the best, sprinted into a long early lead and was never threatened at any stage of the race to win with ease. DOLICE, forwardly placed throughout, closed well, but was no match for the winner. CANTROUD broke tardily and was forced to race wide to get into a contending position. BUNGALOW, slow to find her speed, closed a good gap. RUTH HOGAN stopped badly.

WATER LAD, reserved from the early pace, moved up with good speed when leaving the back stretch, saved ground on the turns and was going away at the finish while well in hand. POSTMAN HOME, racing under strong restraint until the stretch was reached, closed with good speed, but could not get to the winner. BEAU CAVALIER, unable to outrun HAPPY LOPE in the first part, was third back sharply, came to the outside and lost considerable ground. FOREST FAUN raced evenly. HAPPY LOPE had good early speed, but tired. PAINT BOX was pulled up when beaten.

DUELIST, slow to find his speed, worked his way up on the inside in the run through the back stretch, continued to save ground on the inside to take command on the turn, drew into a short lead, but had to be hard ridden. SUSPICIOUS was carried wide on the turn, was blocked midway of the back stretch, recovered quickly, but could not withstand the challenge of the winner and finished wide. Knapp claimed a foul which was not allowed. ROD RACK, a forward factor throughout, was given a respite on the turn and came on again when put to a drive. BUBBLING OUT raced evenly. FLYING VOTE had good early speed, but tired. EMMY FISH could never get up.

DORNOCH, away well and suited by the going, raced under restraint while in the lead on the back stretch, disposed of VACILLATE when called upon and drew away easily to win with much in reserve. VACILLATE, closest to the early pace, made a futile bid to reach the leader on the turn and easily held the others safe. JESTING, under restraint for the first three furlongs, could not get up when called upon. MASTER HERALD, far out of it in the early stages, was never a serious threat. ADA WAN stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:11. Winner, A. C. Schwartz's b. c. SERGEANT HILL, away well, was taken back from the early pace, moved into close contention on the back stretch, wore SWAGGER STICK down in the stretch and drew away with ease. NO MISTAKE, close to the pace throughout, subdued SWAGGER STICK when the latter faltered, but could not withstand the challenge of the winner. SWAGGER STICK displayed good early speed to set the pace, saved ground throughout on the rail, but faltered in the final furlong. VOTE, outrun throughout, was held safe. ENERGETIC BOY raced within easy distance of the leaders for six furlongs, flattened out badly. ACCOLADE was always outrun.

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Speculative markets were sluggish today nd generally a bit lower at the nish as the Treasury boosted its ld-buying price by one nickel, or $34.06 an ounce.

Stocks opened steady, but then gan to lag. As trading progressed few soft spots opened up, although ough buying orders were exeted in the last hour to bring final ices comfortably above the lows d reduce the average net decline a shade less than a point. Turnver was 1,343,880 shares.

Dollars tilted downward in the itial dealings here. Sterling was around 5 cents at one time, but fell back later. Gold currencies nerally followed suit during curity market hours.

Industrial Stocks Firm.

Some of the industrial stocks finished with fair firmness for it was arned that steel operations had ain expanded, though many of e leaders only succeeded in reing earlier losses. U. S. Steel d American Can were up fracnally. American Telephone, still inerable to selling, halved a 2-int reaction which had carried it a new low for the move.

General Motors had a sagging ell, but closed most of the gap. rysler, Du Pont, American Smelt-g, Westinghouse, General Electric, w York Central, Santa Fe, Union cific and Pennsylvania were off lf a point, more or less.

Atlas Tack, transactions in which e being looked into by the State rney general's office, added out 7 points to last Saturday's loss nearly a dozen. Armour of Illis preferred rallied 3¼ net.

Higher Gold Expected.

The decision to raise the gold ice occasioned no surprise in Wall eet quarters, which readily reled recent official word that there d been no change in monetary licy at Washington.

Some may have thought the inease was rather small; few atmpted to guess how high the quotion might eventually go. The sponse of commodities was rather gative, for wheat and cotton ed slightly lower. A few minor ples hardened mildly.

A rise of 8 per cent in steel opations, announced by the Iron and el Institute, made it apparent at consumers are still hurrying specify against contracts which herwise expire on December 31. esumably better business is com to the mills as a result of Govment-sponsored projects and rrent comment as to the indus's immediate future is rather erful.

The institute reported that operans were starting this week at 2 per cent of capacity compared th 31.5 a week ago and 26.9 per nt a month ago. The percentage provement from the autumn low s been 36 per cent.

The Crux of Our Problem

National Economy League Statement Best That Has Been Issued

By Ralph West Robey.

Of all the statements so far issued on the financial program of the Administration, none, it seems to me, has been quite so powerful and deserving of consideration as that just made by the National Economy League. This is because none of the others has struck at the real heart of the problem facing us today with the same directness that we find in the league's statement. Further, none of the others has been so devoid of biased opinions and partisanship. Here we have, in short, a careful analysis of the one point in the recovery program that beyond all others is a proper cause for grave concern. This is the question of the burden the program is placing upon Government credit.

Whether the members of the National Economy League would support the Administration's program were it not for the danger it holds for the Government's credit, and hence our entire financial structure is not clear from the statement. On the whole it rather appears that they would. It is said, for example, that "large expenditures are justified" in the present emergency "in order to relieve distress and promote recovery." In any case, however, this is a relatively minor point. The significant aspect of the statement is that these broader considerations are beside the real issue at present.

Summary May Be Divided Into Four General Points.

Perhaps the simplest manner of presenting a summary of such an analysis as the league makes is to divide it into four points. The first is a resume of what has happened in the way of the national debt in the last few years. If it were complete, such a summary would have to be complicated, but for the present, one needs only to recall that the peak of our debt was August 31, 1919, being approximately $26,600,000,000; that between this date and December 31, 1930, which was the low point since the war, the debt was reduced some $10,600,000,000, or to $16,000,000,000; and that since then there has been an increase of about $7,500,000,000 to $23,500,000,000.

The second point is the record now being made from month to month. On this the league states that assuming an increase during the current fiscal year, ending June 30, next, of $4,000,000,000, the total growth for the fiscal years 1933 and 1934 will be a little over $7,000,000,000. This amounts to something under $300,000,000 a month or about $10,000,000 a day. This estimate of a deficit of $4,000,000,000 for the current fiscal year, it should be pointed out, however, may be too large. Whether it is, will depend upon the rate of expenditures for the next six months, for the deficit now amounts to only some $900,000,000. During the first part of this month, nevertheless, the excess of expenditures over receipts was averaging about $15,000,000 a day.

Plans for the Future Reach Enormous Sums.

The third point in such a summary properly is the plans for the future. Some indication of this is provided by the estimate of a $4,000,000,000 deficit for the current fiscal year. It includes: Loans to closed banks, $1,000,000,000; purchase of stock of banks, $1,000,000,000; direct relief for States, $500,000,000; bank deposit insurance, $150,000,000; agricultural credits, $300,000,000; home owners' loans, $200,000,000, and public works expenditures, $1,250,000,000. As the league points out, however, "hardly a week has passed in which a new and vast commitment of the people's money has not been made" and consequently the above must be considered incomplete. In fact, it will be noticed that it does not include the $400,000,000 made available under the Civil Works Administration.

Finally is the question of what the results of such a drain upon the public Treasury must be. Upon this, perhaps, just two statements are sufficient. First, there is a limit to the capacity of the Government to maintain such expenditures and that if the spending process be not checked before this limit is reached a loss of Government credit and national insolvency will ensue." Secondly, that the danger to the country today does not lie so much in a question of the adoption of unsound money as it does "in a gradual creeping up of the national debt to a point where the use of unsound money is no longer preventable." I do not see how anyone can review such arguments as these presented by the league without being profoundly concerned over the ever increasing expenditures of the Federal Government.

Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 18 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—A mildly optimistic sentiment has been noticed recently in the Boston wool market. While current trading in wool is slow, sentiment has improved as a result of reports that the goods market is showing a better tone. A broader inquiry for wool by manufacturers tends to strengthen futher confidence in raw wool prices.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during the week ended December 16, amounted to 155,900 pounds, as compared with 388,400 during the previous week.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A cheerful tone was registered on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities attracted attention on budget prospects while industrials and oil shares were bought by investors. Other sections, including transatlantic issues, were dull. Uruguayan bonds were firm exceptions. The market closed quiet.

Paris—Traders' hesitancy owing to the absence of any encouraging factors gave the bourse a dull and indecisive tone which firmness in rio tintos and rentes tended to counteract. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Business on the boerse was idle with prices showing a general declining tendency. The market closed unrecovered.

Week's Stock Sales.

Bonds Ease Two-Tenths in Light Trading

Utilities and Industrials in Decline; Sales Cut to $10,673,000.

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Although there was no especial liquidation apparent, bonds generally eased today as the domestic gold rate was boosted 5 cents an ounce, to $34.06, the first advance in the metal since December 1.

The trading volume dwindled with prices, sales totaling only $10,673,000, par value, against the less than ordinary aggregate of $12,233,000 last Friday.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues was off two-tenths of a point for the third consecutive session.

News of Little Note.

Aside from the further theoretical depreciation of the dollar in terms of gold, there was little important news that might have depressed listed loans. Christmas retail trade was reported highly satisfactory, while steel production, freight car loadings and electric power output showed indications of improvement.

Most U. S. Government securities were off 1-32d to 8-32ds of a point despite the announcement that the Treasury, during the week ended December 16, had purchased $16,000,000 of Federal bonds for the sinking fund and for various investment accounts.

The so-called secondary rails were losers of fractions to a point or more. Among these were some maturities of Baltimore & Ohio, Central Pacific, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Illinois Central, M. K. T., New Haven, Southern Pacific and Frisco. A number of the carriers, however, held fairly steady.

On Declining List.

Utility and industrial declines of 1 to around 2 points were suffered by some issues of American Rolling Mill, Chile Copper, Liggett & Myers, North American, Postal Telegraph and Warren Bros.

Various issues of Consolidated Gas, Goodrich, Standard Oils of New Jersey and New York, United Drug and Tobacco Products were a bit higher.

Some foreign obligations rallied along with exchanges. French loans moved up 1 to 2 or more. Those of Dutch East Indies advanced 1 to more than 3 and similar gains were held by bonds of Sydney City, Switzerland, United Kingdom and Rotterdam. The Germans were mildly irregular.

World Cotton In Bales Rises To 25,134,000

Total Increase for 1933 Is 1,629,000 Units; All Nations Up.

New York, Dec. 18.—World production of all kinds of cotton this season, including both American cotton and foreign growths, is about 25,134,000 bales, according to the latest estimate of the New York Cotton Exchange Service, as compared with 23,505,000 bales last season, and 26,535,000 two seasons ago.

Although this season's indicated production is 1,629,000 bales larger than last season's relatively short crop, it is 366,000 bales smaller than the average production of 25,500,000 bales in the past five seasons.

The indicated increase of 1,629,000 bales in the world cotton production this season over last season is due almost entirely to increases in foreign production, since the American crop is only very slightly larger than a year ago. On the basis of the December Government crop estimate, this year's domestic cotton production, in terms of running bales, will be in the neighborhood of 12,968,000 bales as compared with 12,961,000 bales last year, an increase of only 7,000 bales.

Scope of Increase.

Practically all foreign countries show indicated increases in cotton production over last season. In the majority of countries these increases represent returns to the production levels of several years ago.

Total indicated foreign cotton production this season is 12,166,000 equivalent 500-pound bales as compared with 10,544,000 bales last season, and an average of about 10,900,000 bales in the last five seasons.

The Egyptian cotton crop is estimated at 1,784,000 bales as against the unusually small crop of 1,038,000 bales last year, representing a return to the levels of predepression years. The indicated Indian production is 4,320,000 bales, and is somewhat larger than the short crops of 4,109,000 and 3,334,000 bales last year and two years ago, respectively, but compares with previous crops of 4,500,000 to 5,000,000 bales. The largest crops on record are indicated for China and Russia. Chinese production is tentatively placed at 1,950,000 bales as compared with 1,871,000 last year, and Russian production at 1,964,000 as against 1,878,000.

Brazil, Peru, Mexico.

In Brazil, Peru and Mexico, production is back to predepression levels. Miscellaneous foreign cotton-growing countries, which account for about 10 per cent of the total foreign production, are not showing any tendency to expand their production in the aggregate.

The depreciation of the dollar has placed the American cotton grower in a favorable position in foreign cotton markets, notwithstanding the increased supply of foreign growths. While the majority of foreign cotton-producing countries are no longer on the gold standard, with the result that foreign cotton producers are receiving larger returns for their crops than if their currencies were not depreciated, the American dollar has depreciated more than most foreign currencies, with the result that the American cotton grower is paid a higher relative price than his foreign competitor.

As a result, he is much better able to compete in world markets and can sell his cotton abroad at lower prices than foreign producers can afford to sell theirs.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Rayon—Trade estimates are that deliveries of rayon yarns to mills so far this month have been considerable below the figure for the corresponding weeks in November.

Floor covering—Wholesale markets have been reflecting a slightly more active interest on the part of carpet and rug buyers during the past week.

Paper—Trade interests report that firmness continues in the prices for chemical pulp and imported mechanical pulp. Demand for fine papers shows a moderate improvement which is associated with holiday requirements.

Quarried Rock Demand May Revive Old Towns

Nehawka, Nebr., Dec. 18 (AP).—Many dormant and ghost towns of southeastern Nebraska, once prosperous and active, are due for a comeback. The reason is told in a single sentence. Quarried rock is in demand again.

Days were when the old Van Court Quarry near here employed 600 men, and old-timers recall the activity before the turn of the century at Rock Bluffs, St. Deroin, Aspinwall, Brownville, Rulo and others.

Curb's Prices Drift Lower in Quiet Sales

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—A quiet drift lower featured the curb trading today. Losses, however, were narrowed as a better tone developed near the end of the session.

A few specialties were higher but recessions of fractions to more than a point predominated. Alcohols ruled steady with Hiram Walker moving ahead of the group for a 2-point advance. Utilities and oils were easy and metals irregular.

Losses of about 1 to 2 points were registered by Aluminum Co. of America, Dow Chemical, American Light & Traction, Novadel Agene, Electric Bond & Share, Humble Oil, Standard Oil of Ohio, Sherwin Williams, Newmont, Kreuger Brewing, Parker Rust Proof and Swift International.

U. S. Buys More Farm Produce From Canada

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 18 (AP).—An increase of more than $600,000 was shown in the export of farm produce to the United States in November compared with the corresponding month last year, a report issued today by the Dominion bureau of statistics said.

The exports last month were $969,306 as against $302,781 in the corresponding month of 1932. The largest commodities were potatoes, $306,103; bran, shorts and middlings, $190,694, and rye at $158,675. For the five months ended November the value of the export was $5,639,052, compared with $1,584,817 in the corresponding period last year.

Quarried Rock Demand May Revive Old Towns

Nehawka, Nebr., Dec. 18 (AP).—Many dormant and ghost towns of southeastern Nebraska, once prosperous and active, are due for a comeback. The reason is told in a single sentence. Quarried rock is in demand again.

Days were when the old Van Court Quarry near here employed 600 men, and old-timers recall the activity before the turn of the century at Rock Bluffs, St. Deroin, Aspinwall, Brownville, Rulo and others.

Wheat Driven Lower Under Selling Rush

Tax Problems Blamed in Decline; Other Grains Change Little.

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—Disregarding a jump of 5 cents in the Washington price of gold, wheat values averaged lower today.

Selling that appeared to come from income tax dilemmas acted as a weight on the wheat market, with downturns of securities and additional bearish influence.

On the other hand, Government-sponsored relief buying of wheat at Minneapolis and Kansas City served as something of an offset.

Wheat Closes Unsteady.

Wheat closes unsteady, ⅛-⅜ under Saturday's finish; corn, unchanged to ½ higher; oats, unchanged to ¾ off.

Notwithstanding that before trading was begun word from Washington told for the first time in a month that gold was up, the wheat market opened at declines.

At no stage subsequent were rallies of wheat values other than fractional, whereas, at times the setbacks amounted to 1¼ cents. Speculative demand for wheat lacked volume, although reports of a cold wave headed for domestic winter wheat territories attracted considerable notice, the wheat fields at present being minus any snow blanket.

Holding conditions, together with uncertainties about pending grain exchange codes, were handicaps to friends of higher prices for wheat.

Downturns in Value.

Downturns of values were in the face of announcement that the official estimate of the 1933 wheat crop in Australia had been reduced to 160,000,000 bushels, compared with 210,000,000 last year.

Advices were also at hand that the quantity of wheat on ocean passage to importing countries was now down to the lowest level in a great many years, 20,896,000 bushels against 38,096,000 at this time in 1932.

Corn prices developed comparative strength owing to forecasts of colder weather and to more likelihood of curtailment of rural offerings. Large primary receipts of corn today, however, acted as a drag on the market. Oats arrivals were rather liberal. Steadiness of hog values helped to uphold provisions.

Belgium Agrees To Treaty With New Zealand

Negotiations have been concluded for a new commercial treaty between New Zealand and Belgium, with reciprocal tariff concessions, under which the contracting countries propose to lower the import duties or customs surtaxes on selected products, including principally rubber tires, piece goods, and apples, according to a cablegram received in the Department of Commerce from Consul General Calvin M. Hitch, Wellington.

Under the terms of the agreement, New Zealand promises to reduce by 5 per cent ad valorem the present import duties on shoe laces other than leather, carpets and rugs, globes and chimneys for lamps, sensitized surfaces, except postal cards, rifles and other firearms, and to remove the customs surtax of 22½ per cent of the duty from the above products, as well as from matches, rubber tires, window and plate glass, lead and zinc in bars, rods, plates and sheets, and textile piece goods.

In return for the above proposed concessions on the part of New Zealand, Belgium promises to levy the following reduced import duties, in francs, per 100 kilos, on New Zealand products: Cheddar cheese 72, flax yarn 10, apples 25, and to continue to admit wool, hides, tallow, and flax duty free.

(The United States is on a most-favored-nation basis with Belgium. Belgium is the first foreign (non-British) government with whom New Zealand has concluded a commercial treaty. A previous commercial treaty, concluded between representatives of the two governments on December 10, 1931, was not submitted to the respective parliaments for ratification.)

Russia Collects Wheat Crop From Peasantry

Moscow, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Soviet government was informed today that collection of the 1933 grain crop from the peasantry had been completed.

About 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 metric tons were obtained, foreign observers understood, by forced purchase at fixed prices set by the administration. (The metric ton is 2,205 pounds.)

The grain, amounting to about 25 per cent of the total production, will be devoted to feeding the urban population and the army, to export and reserves.

Number of Jobs Given.

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 18 (AP).—Jobs available here in the 30 days ending December 15 were four and a half times greater in number than a year ago, although the demand for factory workers fell off slightly, the employment department of the Associated Industries of Cleveland reported today.

Steel Market Quickened by Order Outlook

Operation Rises Highest in 8 Weeks; Stands at 33 Per Cent.

Cleveland, Dec. 18.—Steel market activity was quickened last week by a strong combination of the second largest weekly awards in 1933 for structural material, negotiations for upward of 13,000 freight cars with other railroad programs maturing, a further flurry in scrap prices, and the expiration January 1 of all contracts carrying prices lower than those announced for first quarter, states the magazine Steel.

The result—wholly contrary to the seasonal trend—was a 4-point rise in steelworks operations to 33 per cent, highest in eight weeks, and a sudden expansion in shipments by some producers to a level exceeding even those of last July. The drive for specifications may well engage iron and steelworks at or near the present rate over the holiday period.

Since comparatively few first quarter contracts have been concluded, mills may be confronted with lean order books January 1, and some apprehension is expressed concerning the production situation in the early weeks of January.

Auto Buying Outlook.

The probability, however, is that automobile manufacturers will begin specifying vigorously for material for new models, while a new policy with regard to quoting is calculated to relieve stress at the close of the quarter, such as now evident, and to spread business more evenly.

This policy provides for the announcement of a quarter's prices at least two months before the beginning of the quarter. For example, it is expected by about January 15 prices for the second quarter will be issued, and present indications point to a rise of $2 to $3 a ton on bars and strip, and $2 on semifinished steel, plates and shapes.

Nearly 300,000 tons of steel will be required for the 12,775 freight cars and 167 passenger and baggage cars for which Federal financing has been concluded. Of these, the Erie list of 3,775 freight cars, 125 passenger and 8 baggage cars already are up for figures.

Van Sweringen Program.

This program by the Van Sweringen lines is believed to be only the beginning, and possibly the smallest, of impending car business. Included in the loan just announced by the Public Works Administration is 30 locomotives.

Other developments in railroad material are purchases of 13,000 tons of tie plates by the Pennsylvania from the Republic Steel Corporation and 12,000 tons from Weirton Steel Co., and the Pennsylvania's distribution of 25,000 additional tons of miscellaneous steel to other interests. Western Pacific is inquiring for 26,000 tons of rails and fastenings, Missouri Pacific, for 25,000 tons, and Lehigh & New England for 500 freight cars.

Except the week of May 6, when 126,000 tons of structure material was ordered for the San Francisco-Oakland Bridge, awards for the past week, amounting to 35,170 tons, were the largest of the year. This tonnage was built up by 12,000 tons for 2 bridges in the New York Central's grade elimination project at Syracuse, N. Y.; 5,000 tons for the Mathieson Alkali Co., Port Arthur, Tex., and 4,000 tons for the San Francisco postoffice.

Structural Steel Needs.

Miscellaneous structural steel requirements, mainly for public work, are increasing. Fabricators have an advantage in the protections given them on prices for specific jobs, extending to the time those jobs are closed; with these exceptions, all other fourth-quarter contracts expiring automatically January 1.

The movement of pig iron is unusually brisk, some of the lake furnaces shipping nearly twice as much in December as last month. Orders for January delivery have improved, but few melters are contracting for the full first quarter. A Pittsburgh furnace is inquiring for six months' supply of coke, approximately 60,000 tons. Scrap prices are up sharply for the third consecutive week.

Steelworks operations last week were increased in all but two districts. Detroit was up 16 points to 52 per cent, Cleveland 5 to 59, Pittsburgh 4 to 28, Chicago 4 to 29½, eastern Pennsylvania 4½ to 23, Youngstown 1 to 36, and Buffalo 1½ to 25½. The Wheeling district remained unchanged at 41, and Birmingham at 52, while New England was down 10 points to 71 per cent. Any change in the rate this week is expected to be upward.

Steel's iron and steel composite last week remained $32.42, and the finished steel composite, $51.10; while the scrap index was up 26 cents to $10.17.

Two Airplanes To Be Built.

Alliance, O., Dec. 18 (AP).—Production of two passenger airplanes will be started next month by the Harper Aircraft Corporation of Elyria.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, Dec. 18.—WHEAT—Receipts, 136 bushels by vessel. Stock in elevators, 1,418,642 bushels.

CORN—Receipts, 2,213 bushels by vessel. Shipments from elevators, 12 bushels. Stock in elevators, 16,644 bushels.

Receipts of corn from the nearby territory are running light and trading is moderate. For yellow and high-colored mixed there is a fair demand.

Cob corn—Quoted at 2.50@2.75 per barrel for carloads prime nearby yellow on spot. Offerings fair and increasing.

Receipts of oats show considerably variation in weight, being mostly light. Demand fair in a jobbing way. Good, heavyweight oats are relatively scarce and such command a good premium.

No. 2 white oats, 47@51, per bushel, as to weight and position.

Note—On all sales of oats to the local trade, excepting those on track, there is an additional charge of 1¼ per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

HAY—General hay market is quiet. No surplus of good timothy. Prices range from 12.00@14.00 per ton, as to grade and kind. The poorer grades of hay are hard to sell at any price. Market irregular on everything below 3 timothy.

NRA Organizes Consumer Unit In Each County

Emergency Council Plan Placed in Operation by Recovery Heads.

County consumer councils, for which plans were recently announced, will be a part of the emergency council set-up, it was revealed at NRA headquarters yesterday.

The consumer councils, each to have a membership of seven persons, will work with the emergency councils and will be represented on the emergency council memberships.

The emergency councils, now being created under an executive order, will coordinate recovery work now being done by various official and semiofficial organizations in each county.

Each county consumer council will include in its membership a member of a women's organization interested in consumer problems, a county agricultural agent, a "dirt farmer," a housewife of moderate means, a manual worker and a member of a consumers' cooperative organization.

One of the purposes of the consumers' councils, it was explained will be to bring rural and urban interests together in each community.

Mrs. Mary Rumsey, chairman of the NRA Consumers Advisory Board, will direct the work of the consumer organization, with Dr. Paul H. Douglas of the advisory board in direct charge.

Bandit Is Bitten, But He Gets $60

Baker Gives Battle, Chews Gunman's Cheek.

A colored bandit, wearing a paper bag as a mask, escaped yesterday with $60 and the imprint of the victim's teeth upon his cheek.

The robber strode into the bakery of J. L. Hammack, 84 Rhode Island avenue, as Hammack and his wife were having their morning coffee. Pointing his pistol at Hammack, he seized the money bag. Hammack ripped the paper from the Negro's face and attacked him. In the struggle he bit the bandit.

Phillips Radios Greeting to Spain

Opens New Service With Good Will Assurance.

A new radio telegraph service from New York to Madrid was instituted yesterday when William Phillips, acting Secretary of State, sent a message expressing American friendship for Spain, the Associated Press reports.

In his message to Alexander Lerroux, president of the Spanish Council, Acting Secretary Phillips said:

"I take this opportunity to express in the name of the American Nation its friendship to the Spanish people and to send at the same time most earnest wishes for the prosperity and continued progress of your great nation."

Radio Waves and Ripples

BABE RUTH has turned radio artist. After years of shunning offers for regular broadcasts, the mighty man of baseball has succumbed to the lure of the microphone for a three-times-a-week series beginning January 3.

Not completely, however, for the Babe is confining his first sustained air effort to transcribing to a set of records cogent observations on the value of athletic training to the youth of our land. But that makes him a radio artist just the same.

Ruth's first record announces details of his plans for taking 50 boys to his training camp next spring and the aims and purposes of Babe Ruth boys clubs he means to organize with his broadcasting. It's really another contest idea. Awards will be the training camp trip, autographed baseballs and gloves.

Back of the Babe's decision, according to his press agents, lies the hope that he really can do something big for our athletically inclined youth. Back of the Babe stands one of the Nation's biggest oil companies, sponsors of the program.

Articles like this really should be turned over to the sports department where the editor would conjure visions of the idol of thousands of baseball fans being quietly laid away in wax impressions, which would require a lot more space than we have been able to consume.

Mrs. Pennyfeather, an important part of N. B. C.'s Cuckoo Hour and yesterday a considerable item in WRC's local show, Monday Revue, plans to get drunk, on the radio only, of course, New Year's Eve.

In previous New Year's sprees before the microphone which, on the word of Mrs. Pennyfeather, are very funny, indeed, the gurgling announcer has provided the necessary bottle pouring sound effect. But this year Mrs. Pennyfeather will get drunk over WRC, and the minds there aren't at all sure they own an announcer who can double as an emptying bottle. In which contingency Mrs. Pennyfeather will hunt up a bottle, water and a glass and do her own gurgling.

Mrs. Pennyfeather was encountered in WRC's well-appointed reception room yesterday. She is Irish and looks it: Red hair, round, red face and John McCormack is her favorite tenor.

Radio is her life. Never one to go about much, devoted to a bedridden husband, the microphone has been her only "outlet." Being funny comes easy to her.

"I merely act like many women I know," she said. "That's why most of my fan mail comes from men. They tell me I remind them of their wives or their wives' mothers."

"Planned Recovery" seems to have been caught in the rush for NRA codes, so fas as broadcasting is concerned. When Secretary Ickes' address scheduled in the cabinet broadcast series for tonight was definitely called off, Gen. Johnson's publicity department, where NRA speeches normally are prepared, was stumped. NBC had to fill the spot with the Pickens sisters.

Sponsors of WMAL's Sunshine Special show have decided that the Horace Hunnicutts have been costing them too much money. The talent will be replaced by recordings.

Another sponsor has been found for Jack Pearl. The Baron, dropped by cigarettes for Metropolitan Opera, carries on under a new contract January 3.

Carl Heck tells about "Mixing Furniture of Different Periods and Styles" without producing anything like the early morning effect obtained by mixing drinks on WRC at 10:30 a. m. today.

Word got around to the broadcasters yesterday that President Roosevelt may deliver his message to Congress in person January 4, the day following the opening session. Only the possibility that business may be paralyzed by every one stopping work to listen is said to be withholding White House approval.

Both C. B. S. and N. B. C. will broadcast proceedings January 3 and 4.

To keep the people in Pittsburgh informed on what may be happening in Congress, Representative Henry Ellenbogen is dickering with WJSV to install lines in his office to carry his comments to WJAS every Sunday night.

WJSV is wondering if there will be any dogs left in the pound by the time Announcer Robert Trout is to do his broadcast from there tonight. Announcement of the program and its intent—to get dogs out of the pound and into homes before Christmas—has just about depleted present stocks.

Play Honors Announced By Central High School

Individual awards went to Charles Grunwell, who took the part of "Teddy" in "The First Dress Suit," which was judged the best of the six plays presented, and to Constance Kramer, daughter of Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools, who had the role of "Marietta" in "The Teeth of the Gift Horse," selected as the second best play.

Hayden Heads Union Of Musicians 27th Year

A. C. Hayden was unanimously elected president of the Musicians Protective Union, Local 161, American Federation of Musicians, Sunday. This is his twenty-seventh consecutive year as president.

Grain Output For 1933 Hits Lowest Mark

Ithaca, N. Y., Dec. 18 (AP).—Prof. F. A. Pearson, of Cornell University, one of the Roosevelt Administration's monetary advisers, reported today that "production of the six grains per capita in 1933 is the lowest on record."

The production per capita this year was 1,518 pounds with the next lowest 1,789 pounds in 1874, he said.

"During the last 68 years, only six yields were as low as those for 1933," he reports. "The yield per acre of the six grain crops, corn, oats, wheat, barley, rye and buckwheat, in 1933, was 961 pounds per acre. This is the lowest since 1901, when it was 924 pounds."

Prof. Pearson and George A. Warren, of Cornell, are credited with advising in the direction of the Government gold-purchase policy Prof. Pearson says most of the present difficulties of agriculture arose from monetary chaos rather than from any fundamental change in the production or consumption of the various farm products.

"With the suspension of the gold standard, prices have risen, but the advance has not been uniform," he said. "In general, those things that fell most have risen most.

"In the process of restoring the price level, prices paid to the farmers for farm products and prices of other basic commodities should advance more rapidly than the general price level. Retail prices of food and the cost of living should lag. Unless interferred with by some artificial means, a rising price level will automatically restore an approximate equilibrium in the price structure."

The Warren-Peason theory of managed currency holds that an increase in the price of gold will result in a price increase for all other commodities.

Culbertson on Bridge

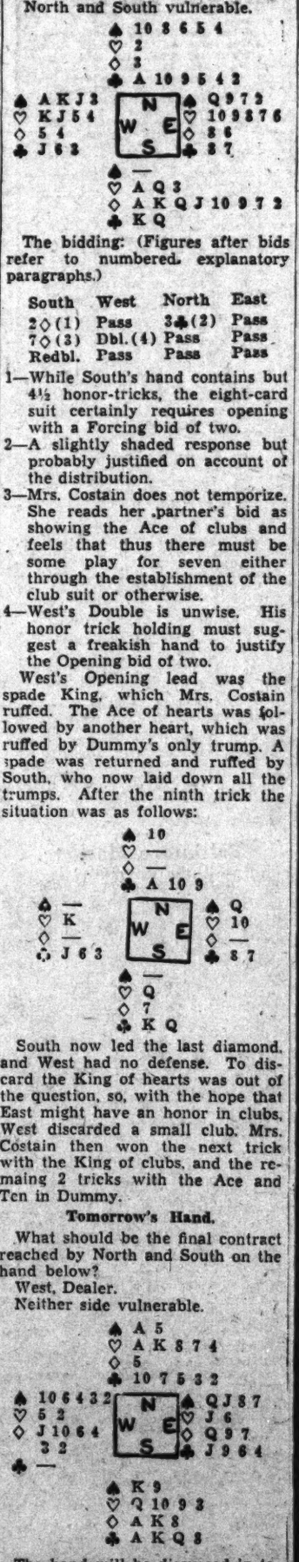
A Grand Slam by a Squeeze.

Mr. Thomas B. Costain is one of the editorial executives of a great publishing house, and while his days are pretty well filled with his responsibilities in that respect, he finds time to play a good deal of Bridge. His wife is considered one of the strongest women players in her circle, and after noting the interesting manner in which she fulfilled a redoubled Grand Slam contract on the hand below, I think my readers will understand why Mr. Costain rates her as his favorite partner.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
2◇(1)	Pass	3♣(2)	Pass
7◇(3)	Dbl.(4)	Pass	Pass
Redbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—While South's hand contains but 4½ honor-tricks, the eight-card suit certainly requires opening with a Forcing bid of two.
2—A slightly shaded response but probably justified on account of the distribution.
3—Mrs. Costain does not temporize. She reads her partner's bid as showing the Ace of clubs and feels that thus there must be some play for seven either through the establishment of the club suit or otherwise.
4—West's Double is unwise. His honor trick holding must suggest a freakish hand to justify the Opening bid of two.

West's Opening lead was the spade King, which Mrs. Costain ruffed. The Ace of hearts was followed by another heart, which was ruffed by Dummy's only trump. A spade was returned and ruffed by South, who now laid down all the trumps. After the ninth trick the situation was as follows:

South now led the last diamond, and West had no defense. To discard the King of hearts was out of the question, so, with the hope that East might have an honor in clubs, West discarded a small club. Mrs. Costain then won the next trick with the King of clubs, and the remaing 2 tricks with the Ace and Ten in Dummy.

Tomorrow's Hand.

West, Dealer.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

State Department Has Its Own Russian Linguists.

(Associated Press.)

The State Department does not need or want any Russian interpreters.

Since recognition of the Soviet by the United States, the department has been deluged with applications from Russian interpreters—Russian-speaking, writing and understanding clerks and typists—all desiring positions with the American Embassy in Moscow or one of the consulates to be established.

There are at least 75 career men in the American Foreign Service, and at least 200 clerks employed by the Foreign Service, who are masters of the Russian language.

Repeal Causes Revenue Jump

U. S. Collected $9,111,173 in Liquor Taxes First 12 Days of December.

(Associated Press.)

The Internal Revenue Bureau said yesterday that $3,174,338 was derived from stamp taxes on distilled spirits and wines. Another $3,565,180 was collected on beer of more than 3.2 per cent.

While repeal did not become effective until December 5, officials explained that heavy stamp sales began December 1 in anticipation of the day and consequently in gauging the first returns, officials took the days immediately preceding repeal.

Other taxes included in the total were $2,126,792 on 3.2 beer, $191,148 on retail liquor licenses, $49,564 on wholesale licenses, and $4,100 on rectifiers.

The tax on beer exceeding 3.2 per cent is $6 a barrel, while that on 3.2 beer is $5 a barrel.

Appalachia, Va., Dec. 18 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Melisia Emmaline Williams, 65, wife of William Williams and mother of Leonard E. Williams, principal of the Appalachia High School.

Alien Gets Stay Of Deportation

Supreme Court to Review Case of Frank Borich, Mine Union Aid.

(Associated Press.)

Frank Borich, an alien living at Pittsburgh, was granted a review by the Supreme Court yesterday in his fight to prevent deportation for radical activities.

The Department of Labor charged he was secretary of the National Miners Union, which, it is alleged, had declared adherence to the principles of the Red International of Labor Unions, and that he had been active for the Communist party.

Borich denied the charges, using the 1932 constitution of the National Miners' Union to substantiate his claim that the organization was not objectionably radical.

The Government insisted the constitution had been adopted for the purpose of defeating the prosecution. The Third Circuit Court of Appeals ordered Borich held for deportation.

Coast Guard Boat Bids Turned Down

All Exceed $13,560,000 Building Fund.

Acting Secretary Morgenthau yesterday rejected bids for construction of nine Coast Guard cutters of the 300-foot type, according to the Associated Press.

The Treasury received ten bids, four from navy yards and six from private shipyards. All would have exceeded the Public Works allotment of $13,560,000 for the nine vessels.

Morgenthau gave that as his reason for rejecting the bids and told the division of construction and repairs of the Coast Guard to modify specifications for the vessels so they could be built within the funds allotted.

Election of Mrs. Kemp Certified to Congress

The office of the clerk of the House yesterday received from the Louisiana Secretary of State a certificate of election of Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, sr., to the House from the Sixth Louisana District, according to the Associated Press.

Officials of the House Office Building said Mrs. Kemp had not yet applied for a suite.

Walt Mason, Himself

Health and Courage.

The man endowed with perfect health can calmly view the loss of wealth, and smile when stern officials come with writ and seal and muffled drum to levy on his eight-day clock, his cow and hens and other stock. His works are all in good repair, and he could whip a polar bear; his blood is running rich and warm, no indigestion racks his form, he has no spavins on his knees, he has no foot-and-mouth disease, he has no gout, he has no flu, and he is strictly good as new. Why should he shrivel up and wail when bonds default and coupons fail? Why should he say that life's a frost when banks blow up and shares are lost? What matters it to one who's well if his investments prove a sell? The world is wide and chances great, he can restore his high estate, can make recovery complete, and bask again in Easy street. But if a man is sick and sad and doomed to wear a liver pad, if he has spasms in his neck, if all his vitals are a wreck, he may be pardoned if he weeps when all his wealth is gone for keeps. It's hard to be a cheerful scout when one's afflicted with the gout. It's hard to blow triumphant horns when one has six or seven corns. The man with ringbones may complain, and be considered safe and sane, where one who's stalwart, strong and hale disgusts us when he makes his wail.

Court Upholds Cut in Retired Officers' Pay

McCarl Ruling Supported; Comes Under Provision of Economy Act.

The ruling of Comptroller General J. R. McCarl, upholding the economy act provision that retired members of the military and naval services were subject to a pay cut of 8 1-3 per cent, was supported by the District Court of Appeals yesterday.

A section of the act provided that no court of the United States should have jurisdiction of any suit against an officer of the United States unless the suit involved constitutional questions.

Failure to show the constitutional question involved, plus this provision, the Appellate Court said, made the ruling of the Comptroller General "of full force and effect."

John H. Hoeppel, who sought the ruling, was retired as a master sergeant in 1921. Following deduction of the pay cut from his salary he sought a court ruling, which was favorable in the District Supreme Court, but which was reversed on appeal.

Jail Conditions Here Attacked

700 Often Jammed Into Civil War Day Cells Built for 455, Club Told.

The District of Columbia has long since outgrown its jail, James B. Bennett, assistant to the director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, told the Monday Evening Club last night in the Willard Hotel.

The jail was built during the Civil War days. Its ventilation, sanitation and facilities for exercise are inadequate, Bennett said. With a capacity of 455 the jail is often jammed with as many as 700 persons, crowding 22 men into cells built for 8, he said.

George S. Wilson, director of Public Welfare, said the District daily cares for 10,500 dependents costing the District government $5,500,000 yearly.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Woman's Bureau, spoke on the care of the "delinquent" sick by the Woman's Bureau. Many of them have no homes to go to after they receive treatment, she said. The Receiving Home for Children is forced to perform too many functions, she added. With inadequate equipment, the home is used as a lodging house and a detention home.

The club passed a resolution favoring the dispensing of liquor by the District government only, prohibiting sale of drinks by any private agency.

Citizens' Body Requests Aid in Sidewalk Project

Aid of the Federation of Civic Associations in securing sidewalks for the northeast suburban area was sought last night by the Capital View Civic Association at a meeting in the Capital View Baptist Church. The association also directed a petition be sent to P. W. A. authorities for playground funds for the District.

Officers were elected as follows: Bruce Stewart, president; Mrs. Emma Van Rooyen, vice president; William Anson Longe, financial secretary; Mrs. Mary Thomas, treasurer, and the Rev. John Franklin, chaplain.

Echoes of Madison's Minuets Due Shock at White House Ball

(United Press.)

Myer Davis is going to take a 20-piece band over to the New Year's Eve ball at the White House and start 'em off with "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?" just to find out whether the Roosevelts like their music hot or classical.

He says you never can tell what Presidents' families are going to like in the way of music, and he ought to know, because he has been playing at White House dances for 16 years. If "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?" gets across all right, Davis plans to swing the boys right into "Dinner At Eight" and give the guests a second chorus with violins and muted trombones that will be the hottest thing ever heard in the east room.

By that time, Davis figures, he ought to know about where he stands. This is not a new problem with him. Back in Wilson's administration, he thought the thing to do was to stick to Strauss waltzes and things with lots of dignity. However, he got up his courage one night and cut loose with "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

"It wowed 'em," Mr. Davis explained modestly.

The Hardings leaned to the classical school, as Davis calls it, and during that administration he played "La Paloma" and "End of a Perfect Day."

President Coolidge didn't go in much for dancing. The Hoovers liked most any kind of music, but they insisted that the dances end promptly at 1 a. m. A military aid usually stood right in front of the orchestra, Davis said, just to be sure that the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" arose at the right time.

"Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf" is definitely in the program Davis said. Just for old-time's sake, he plans to give them "Blue Danube" and "Merry Widow," too, and if it turns out that the guests are waltz-minded he might slip "Trees" in as an encore.

It is doubtful whether "Happy Days Are Here Again"—the Roosevelt campaign song—will be played. That would lend a political atmosphere to what is considered a strictly social occasion.

"How about 'Home of the Range, is it in or out?" Mr. Davis was asked. "That's President Roosevelt's favorite song, you know."

Man Who Bought Beer "for Senator" Convicted.

A second trial, after he had been convicted of obtaining 25 cases of beer on false pretenses, yesterday resulted in a second conviction for Jack Watkins, colored, in District Supreme Court.

Watkins is charged with having obtained the beer on fraudulent representations concerning Senator Carter Glass. The senator, he said, wanted the beer for a party. The Virginian, however, gained his first knowledge of the transaction when a check, given in payment for the beer, was brought to his attention.

The case was tried before Justice Peyton Gordon. Assistant United States Attorney John J. Sirica prosecuted.

Terrier Returns, Taking 3 Months To Trek 40 Miles

Joliet, Ill., Dec. 18 (A.P.).—It took him three months to do it, but Mike, a small and wiry fox terrier, got home today.

Home for him is the Franciscan Order's establishment here. A year ago Mike's owner, the Rev. Father Eligius Weir, of Joliet Prison staff, gave the dog to an 8-year-old Chicago boy, John Surges, who took Mike there.

District Bar Opens Action Against Duke

Association Seeks to Oust or Suspend Capital Attorney.

The grievance committee of the District Bar Association yesterday began, in District Supreme Court, presentation of evidence by which it expects to secure either the disbarment or suspension of Jesse C. Duke.

Through its committee the association placed in record numerous documents in which Duke is quoted as leveling serious charges against United States Attorney Leo A. Rover and Justice F. D. Letts, of the District Supreme Court.

Duke charged that a "diluted, deleted, incomplete and false" bill of exceptions had been sent to the District Court of Appeals by Justice Letts and Mr. Rover. He alleged that in committing this act, the two were guilty of obstruction of justice.

Almost the entire day was spent reading excerpts from court records and in taking testimony of Capt. Harold W. Orcutt, assistant United States attorney, who handled prosecution of a liquor conspiracy from which arose the charges.

Orcutt said that in compiling his bill of exceptions, he drew from a transcript of the trial every material "exception" covered by the designation of errors. He will resume the stand today to be cross-examined by Duke, who is handling his own defense.

Chief Justice A. A. Wheat and Associate Justices Jennings Bailey and Daniel W. O'Donoghue are sitting in the case. A list of witnesses that includes appeals court justices and United States Senators has been notified to appear.
